AUTO COLLISION IN FOG CAUSES MAN'S DEATH

E. J. McCarthy Of McKeesport Is Dead In Accident; Body Burned

Driver Declares Collision Is Due To Dense Fog On Highway

(Special To The News)

GREENVILLE, Pa., July 18.—E. J. McCarthy, of McKeesport, Pa., was killed in an auto collision on the Erie highway at Osgoods, three or four miles north of here early this morning, when his car collided in the fog with that of Don McMillan, of Pierpont, Ohio, the collision taking place in a dense fog.

McMillan was taken into custody by officers following the accident, and is being held at Mercer pending a probe of the case.

According to McMillan, the crash was due to the fog. He says that immediately after the mishap, an explosion occured in McCarthy's auto, and the machine was blown 30 feet or more, and McCarthy was burned. When McCarthy's body was taken to the morgue, after being picked up from the road, it was found to be terribly burned.

R. E. Williams, a telegraph operator at a tower nearby, who was attracted to the scene following the crash said that as he approached, he heard loud talking and saw McMillan, apparently working over the body of McCarthy. As he reached the scene, McMillan told him the story of the crash, as related above.

Officers were then summoned, and McMillan was taken to Mercer pending a probe, and the body of McCarthy was removed to a Greenville morgue.

Political Bees Buzzing Round At Rapid City

New Secretary For President Coolidge Is Likely In Fall

NEW CANDIDATE FOR VICE PRESIDENT

South Dakota Governor Is Aspirant For Democratic Place

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

RAPID CITY, S. D. July 18.—From out of a week-end of hectic political maneuvering at and around the summer White House there today emerged a new candidate for the 1928 Democratic vice presidential nomination and the possibility of a switch in presidential secretaries before next year's election.

William J. Bulow, governor of South Dakota, in an interview, announced himself as an aspirant for the vice presidency on the Democratic ticket; Everett Sanders, secretary to President Coolidge, denied reports that he intended to take a vacation beginning August 1, but remained silent on the suggestion that he would retire in time to run against Senator Arthur Robinson next year in Indiana.

Reports Usurp Interest

Both reports occupied attention in the Black Hills today to the excursion of the comings and goings of the President. Bulow on Saturday failed to deliver a previously prepared speech at Ardmore, S. D., in the presence of the executive, attacking the administration's farm policy, but he was out today with a suggestion he would be the ideal candidate for the lower end of the 1928 Democratic ticket.

Sanders, meanwhile, according to semi-official reports was expected to resign—presumably to make way for a seasoned politican able to swing delegations at next year's national convention to the support of Mr. Coolidge or his choice.

Any such intention, however, was denied indignantly by Sanders upon receipt of the first newspaper stories touching on the rumor. The allegation most vigorously was declared to be untrue.

Gov. Bulow announced the South Dakota delegation to the Democratic national convention would vote for him until a propitious break came, at which time it was entirely possible they would take kindly to the suggestion that their governor be placed on the second half of the ticket.

Gov. Al Smith, of New York, was eliminated by Bulow as a presidential nominee because he was "too wet." The South Dakota executive amplified his own statement by remarking that he, a protestant, was rearinig his three children in the Catholic church.

With Smith eliminated to his own satisfaction, Gov. Bulow chose Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, as the probable Democrat presidential nominee.

Will Take Ten Years To Perfect Ocean Air Voyages Says Byrd

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 18.—Perfection of trans-Atlantic voyages will take ten years, for there must be many more pioneering flights to chart safe air lanes, Commander Richard E. Byrd said today on his return to New York.

Sitting in the Presidential Suite on the Leviathan, he told newspapermen of the possibilities of aviation and of the hazardous flight made by the monoplane America.

"We obtained more scientific data by flying through storms than if we had experienced fine weather," he said. "We were surprised, however, when we struck a storm area over France.

"The outstanding high lights of our flight, I believe, is the fact that I am convinced that a plane can stand against anything and come through all right.

"But to date the trans-Atlantic air lanes have not been charted sufficiently and other fliers will be needed to make observations before regular trips are possible.

"It will take 10 years, I believe, to actually perfect trans-Atlantic flying. There must be larger planes and it will be necessary to have them multi-motored. Then, no storm will be able to stop the plane of the future.

"I agree with Colonel Lindbergh that floating docks in mid-ocean would help, but until some way is found to conquer the fog we cannot depend on them.

"At present America is behind Europe in aviation, but I believe that when the business men take up the cause we will outdistance the rest of the world as we have with automobiles and railroads."

An incident of the flight hitherto not revealed, was told by Commander Byrd. He said that after the America passed over St. Johns, Newfoundland, Lieutenant Noville reported the plane was using 42 gallons of gasoline an hour. Byrd estimated that at this rate the fuel would not last until they reached Europe.

"We were pretty sick", he said, "un-

Forty Two Persons Wanted This Dog

Woman Is Satisfied That New Castle News Ads Get Results

To prove the worth of The News classified advertising columns let us quote a young lady who had the experience of finding out the value of a "for sale" item herself.

She says: "On last Friday I discovered in the classified ad page of The News about a pet dog, which I would give away free to anyone who would provide a good home for the dog and take good care of it. From the time the paper came out in the afternoon until this morning, the telephone has rang continually; people calling up to see about getting the dog. I have had 42 calls for it since Friday afternoon but I gave the dog to one of the first callers, however. I'm sure the dog got a fine home."

Vienna Quiet; Believe Danger Of Revolt Over

Austrian Government Takes Vigorous Steps To Prevent Further Rioting

CIVIL WAR DANGER IS BELIEVED PAST

Reorganization Of Government Is Tentatively Promised By Chamber

(International News Service)

VIENNA (via Bratislava) July 18.—With more than 70 dead and 300 wounded, the Austrian government took vigorous measures today to prevent a recurrence of the rioting which for a time threatened to grow into a national revolution.

About 10,000 national troops are stationed in the suburbs and in some districts the police have begun to disarm the recalcitrants.

The city is quiet. Street cars and motor buses are running.

Danger Is Passed

Government officials claim that all danger of civil war is past.

Official denial is made of reports that foreign diplomats asked for intervention by foreign troops. It is admitted that intervention by any of Austria's neighbors might lead to grave international complications in central Europe, for the uprising here has grown into more than a domestic problem.

Chancellor Seipel issued a communique promising to call parliament into special session, but demanding that the socialists allow freedom of debate without pressure.

Counter-Proposals Offered Delegates To Naval Parley

United States Will Not Reject Anglo-Japanese Suggestions Said

(International News Service)

GENEVA, July 18.—American counter-propocals will be offered to the Anglo-Japanese suggestions for a naval disarmament agreement as put forth, it was learned today in a secret meeting of the chief delegates to the Tri-Partite conference.

Stveral of the Angelo-Japanese proposals are unacceptable to the United States. It is not planned to reject them flatly but to offer counter-proposals.

The situation has not become delicate and observers agree that Great Britain has maneuvered the conference in a position where if it fails the burden of blame will seem to rest upon the United States.

After the secret meeting today a communique was issued stating that conversations have been proceeding with a view to reconciling the British and Japanese viewponts and "progress has been made which is sufficiently encouraging to warrant further examination of the matter in detail."

Hunt Bandit Near Ridgway

Notorious Cleveland Bandit Being Pursued By Officers

MAKES ESCAPE FROM LONE CABIN

(International News Service)

DUBOIS, Pa., July 18.—Posses of state police and Cleveland detectives scoured the mountains in the neighborhood of Byrnedale, near here today while other groups sped towards Ridgway in an effort to apprehend Joe Russell, notorious Cleveland bandit, wanted in connection with 21 robberies and 14 auto thefts.

Russell was surrounded in a cabin near Byrnesdale, 30 miles east of here, but escaped at 4 o'clock this morning and was believed to have headed toward Ridgway.

Find Cabin Empty

A group of Cleveland detectives arrived here about 7 o'clock last night and closed in on Russell, where he was hiding in a cabin near Ridgway. When the officers, aided by state police, rushed the cabin, they found it empty.

The officers arrested Steve Rebo, 28, police character here, on the theory he had tipped off Russell to the search for him. After putting Rebo through a "third degree" he told the officers Russell had started toward Ridgway.

Russell, according to the Cleveland detectives, is a notorious police character there, and dangerous man. The officers were prepared to "shoot it out" with Russell whenever they saw him.

The belief was prevalent that the bandit was heavily armed, and would put up a stiff fight before being taken.

Russell escaped from Cleveland detectives 10 days ago, after he had been arrested on a robbery charge, the officers said.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Five of the seven men who have flown from America to Europe in one hop returned today to find that New York has earned its reputation for being blase.

Commander Richard E. Byrd, and his three companions, and Clarence Chamberlin, were received with official pomp and ceremony, on their arrival, but the wild spirit of acclaim with which Col. Charles Lindbergh, the first man to fly to Paris, was greeted, was distinctly missing.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Five more heroic trans-Atlantic aviators returned home today to receive the acclaim of the nation which sent them out on their perilous flights to Europe.

There isn't a clock to disturb my dreams, no labor to urge or goad, and there isn't a thing that will get me up, but the call of the open road. And when I arise it matters not if its early or rather late, for there are no assignments to urge me on, no interview or a date. But all outdoors is a-calling me to hurry and greet the sun, for there's miles to do over hill and dale before all the daylight is done. For today is the day the vacation starts, far from the daily round, and nobody knows by a hundred miles just where we can be found. Two long weeks to just gypsy around, to motor or to swim or to play, two long weeks of an idler's life, its eighty-two today.

Patrolman Faces Homicide Charge; Woman Is Killed

New York Policeman Charged With Homicide In Apartment House Shooting

POLICEMAN SHOT, SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 18.—A charge of homicide was placed today against Patrolman Walter Sharland, 50, following a shooting in which a woman was killed and the policeman was critically wounded. All shots were fired from his own revolver.

The dead woman is Mrs. Christina Quinlan, 45. Sharland, hovering between life and death at Columbus hospital, admitted quarreling with her.

The homicide charge resulted in an investigation by detectives who questioned two women witnesses, the superintendent of the apartment where the woman lived and Sharland himself in his short period of consciousness.

The tragedy occurred while one of Mrs. Quinlan's woman friends turned to run for police, and another cowered, terrified, in an adjacent room.

Mrs. Mildred Grover told police she saw Sharland draw his .25-calibre revolver just as she started for help. Then a shot rang out and she heard Mrs. Quinlan shriek:

"My God, it's gone right through me."

At Columbus hospital, however, Sharland emerged from a coma and told police Mrs. Quinlan did the shooting after wresting his weapon from him.

Sharland lapsed again into unconsciousness. Hospital attendants said he had little chance to live and would be permanently blind if he did.

Trouble In the Air.

From now until October there will be trouble in the air for hay fever victims who do not take proper protective measures.

It is estimated that 75% of all cases of hay fever are caused by wind borne pollens of various weeds and flowers and nearly all of this trouble can be prevented or greatly alleviated through your physician by what is known as the pollen extract treatment.

Since time is a factor in the efficacy of the treatment, early treatment is advisable.

In this, as in treating other ills your physician can do most for you if you go to him before the trouble gains headway.

Whenever treatment of any kind necessitates the use of medicine bring us the prescription.

Town Talk

Rapid progress is being made by a bricklayer, employed by John B. Thorson Company, in the repaving of South Mill street. Five men carried brick to the bricklayer and he kept them busy as hornets. Councilman Burns, during a session of council today developed that while the councilmen had made a view of Vogan street following a petition for grading, nine months ago, no report had been delivered to city council. Mushrooms have been removed from local streets, according to traffic police who declare the removal has benefitted traffic. The fire apparatus today made this obvious while answering a call to the east side, the lines painted recently giving the big equipment an opportunity to make a beautiful swing from East street eastward into East Washington street. The mushroom removal at Grant and North Jefferson streets has developed beneficial results.

There is a tendency on the part of some motorists to not pay serious attention to the "stop" signs at through traffic streets and the sane motorist would not express chagrin were some of the foolhardy members of the "don't obey the rule" aggregation taken into custody. The most violations occur at Grant and Jefferson, South and South Mercer and East and North streets, according to observation.

About one dozen of the Midgets who have spent two weeks at the Y. M. C. Another squad of boys, from 12 to 16, will hie for the camp Tuesday. All of the boys who have attended the camp report having a splendid vacation.

Of all the foolhardy stunts we have seen in years, one that was witnessed on the Wilmington road, during the heavy Sunday traffic was about the worst. A lad, of about seven or eight years of age, on a miniature bicycle pedalled his way out the Wilmington road, in the direct line of traffic. Many auto drivers had to stop, and hold up cars behind them to prevent running down this juvenile cyclist. Even on the hills the lad stayed on his wheel and slowly pedalled his way. Many times traffic was impeded. Perhaps the lad was not to blame, and perhaps his parents didn't know of the stunt, but it was a foolhardy one.

Lindbergh Stamps Being Sold Here

Demand Is Immediate For Stamps As Supply Is Received

Lindbergh ail mail stamps are now on sale at the New Castle postoffice, an allotment having been received this morning and already some of them have been sold.

In commemoration of the wonderful feat of Colonel Lindbergh the postoffice department at Washington, D. C., some time ago issued a new air mail stamp called the Lindbergh air mail stamp. Hundreds of thousands of these stamps were printed and distributed first to those offices where Lindbergh had special interests and later to the larger cities and postoffices where many air mail stamps are used. New Castle was rather low in the list in receiving her allotment, not so much on account of the size of the community as from the fact that there is little use of the air mail from this station.

The stamp, which is of the 10 cent denomination, is printed light blue on a white background and in the center is a picture of Lindbergh's plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis". Across the top of the stamp are printed the words "United States Postage" and just beneath the words "Lindbergh Air Mail". On the left margin of the stamp is found a map of the northern coast of North America and the words "New York". On the right margin is found a map of the west coast of Europe and the word "Paris", while the dotted line joining these two cities shows his route of flight.

By use of these stamps mail may be sent by air mail to different points of the United States or foreign countries. The rate is 10 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof for domestic mail, while for foreign mail it is 10 cents in addition to the regular foreign postage.

THOUSANDS TAKE PART IN GREETING TO FLYING HEROES

Germany, arrived at Quarantine this morning aboard the Leviathan.

All the way up the bay the great liner was surrounded by screeching tugs and harbor craft, blowing off great clouds of steam in noisy welcome. At Quarantine the Leviathan was met by the reception boat Macom, bearing officials, family and friends of the fliers. Among the first to greet the aviators and congratulate them on their successful flights was Charles Lindbergh, the first man to span the Atlantic from the United States to the European continent by air.

Din of Welcome

As the Macom made its way up the harbor amid the din of welcome, scores of planes circled overhead, the roar of their motors adding to the general pandemonium. But this was only the beginning. The fliers were due at the Battery soon after noon, and from that time on, for the next four days, they can hardly call their lives their own.

Following a triumphal march up Broadway to City Hall, where the official reception will take place, a round of entertainment will start which will keep the heroes of the hour in a turmoil.

Acosta and Noville were met at Quarantine by their wives, but Mrs. Byrd waited at the Battery to greet her husband. The commander's mother, however, went down the bay. Floyd Bennett, pilot for Byrd on his North Pole flight, also was aboard the Macom.

Plane Trails Fliers

Trailing the fliers up the bay in the hold of the Leviathan was the "America", in which Byrd and his crew flew to France. The "Columbia" in which Chamberlin made his trip to Germany with Charles A. Levine, is still in Europe, from where Levine hopes to fly back.

The crowds awaiting the heroes at City Hall were surprised to see a large German flag fluttering with the emblems of other nations from the top of the building. This is the first time since the war that the flag has been used in an official ceremony. Its presence was not explained, but it was believed to be due to the fact that Chemberlin ended his great flight in Germany.

Impressive Ceremony.

Broadway, from the Battery to city hall, was crowded with enthusiastic admirers of the fliers, but the jam was by no means as great as that which occurred when Lindbergh returned to New York. The crowds were more orderly, there was less cheering, and the air was not so filled with paper and streamers and confetti.

In a way the ceremony of welcome was more impressive, due to the presence of Admiral Plunkett and other high officers of the navy, who came to greet Commander Byrd, but the wild spirit of mob acclaim was missing, and the thousands of policemen on duty had less trouble in handling the crowds.

This may have been due in part to the weather, which was threatening. The grandstands at city hall plaza were not filled to overflowing as they were when Lindbergh returned, and polite applause took the place of wild cheering.

As the official reception began in front of the City Hall, where the fliers, Byrd, Bert Acosta, George Noville, Bernt Balchen and Chamberlin, were greeted by Mayor Walker, a slight rain began to fall, almost completely emptying the stands, which had been only partially filled with spectators.

The crowds lining the sidewalks dispersed and the scene hardly differed from that of any rainy afternoon in New York.

promised tentatively reorganization of the government in due course of time "so long as it is not carried out under pressure".

Both Chancellor Seipel and Burgomaster Seitz issued appeals to the public to help maintain law and order, promising an adjustment of the troubles.

The origin of the outbreak remains somewhat obscure. It is reported, however, that it was precipitated by a few hundred communists who began shooting during a demonstration by socialists in front of the palace of justice. A share of the blame is placed upon the social democrats, also.

Flags at Half Mast

Flags are flying at half mast in the workers' quarters, and many houses are draped with mourning for the dead.

Funerals for the victims will be held on Wednesday, when more trouble may break out. However, strong military and police precautions will be taken to preserve order on that day.

The dead are not all workers. Five of them are policemen; three are women and many are youths.

During the past 24 hours there have been attempts by worker members of the social democratic party to gather into mobs, but they were quickly dispersed by the police.

United States Minister Washburn takes a more optimistic view of the situation. He said he did not believe that foreigners in Vienna were in any danger.

Austria is in a peculiar position. The little country is "top heavy". Out of a population of only 7,000,000, about 1,850,000 live in Vienna and produce no foodstuffs.

Mrs. Mary J. McCommon, and Mrs. Hazel Grossman, Epworth street Mrs. Margaret Young of Youngstown, O., Mrs. John Dodds and Mrs. Joseph Bowen of New Wilmington, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Woodling, of Albion, Pa.

til some time later when Noville reported he had made an error because the ship was tilted at the time he estimated our fuel supply and our gauges were not correct."

Byrd praised the landing made by Lieutenant Balchen and said that the flight had not shaken his faith in any member of his crew. He expressed interest in the New York-to-Rome flight planned by Lloyd Bertaud and said: "It can be done".

Commander Byrd will remain in New York for several days, he said, and then will begin preparations for his South Pole flight.

The parade arrived at City Hall at 12:33. Commander Byrd sat in an open car, doffing his hat to the crowds and saluting the officers in the reviewing stand. The crowd was almost sparse, hardly greater than that which gathers in the square during the lunch hour almost daily to watch some minor reception. The cameramen seemed to be the only ones to show any great enthusiasm. They dashed about, as usual, between the cars.

DINNER STORIES

He was boring her to tears when in came her dog. "Ah," he exclaimed, "have you taught him any more tricks since I was here last?" "Yes," she said sweetly, "if you whistle he will bring your hat."

Good Explanation.

It was at the scene of an automobile accident: An elderly old lady in one of the first cars to be stopped by the debris of the smash-up, leaned from her car as a very much battered man, with a hastily arranged bandage around his ankle, hobbled by.

"Oh, my," she said, "did you hurt your ankle?"

"Naw," replied the man, "I lost both eyes. This bandage slipped down."

INSTEAD of risking old-time "sanitary pads," 8 in 10 better-class women employ a NEW way called "Kotex." Filled with Cellucotton wadding, the world's super-absorbent, it is 5 times more absorbent.

Kotex also deodorizes. It discards easily as tissue—no laundry. Thus, in three important ways, it solves a serious summer problem for women.

More than a mere sanitary pad, Kotex offers safe and certain scientific protection.

Obtain Kotex. For peace-of-mind's sake, accept no other. See that box is marked "Kotex." If it isn't, it is not genuine Kotex.

OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL

AMERICA is still the land of opportunity, let those who may speak to the contrary. Nothing is more absurd than the familiar complaint that nothing more is to be gained in the New World by ambition and merit.

These Jeremiahs believe in all seriousness that all the rich men are rich already and no more are to be made rich, that the world has exhausted its entire supply of honors and all that remains for the ambitious today is to work for a wage or a salary and hope in vain that some day a ten-spot invested in wildcat oil stock will make them rich.

In truth there are more men making fortunes and winning renown and high honors in this country than ever before if these new fortunes and honors were to be judged by those of the past. The difficulty now is that we speak of fortunes in terms of millions and of honors in terms of world-conquerors, presidents, international diplomats, world-famous artists and the like. Those were lower stars to which our forefathers hitched their aspiring wagons. There are still big stakes, but many of us must be content with such as were big a score of years ago.

If the American is not too particular there is no valid reason why he can not win some monetary or honorary prize, just as there are few Frenchmen who need to be without some ribbon of honor. Just now there seems to be at least a half dozen opportunities for fame and fortune for every man, woman and child who can read and write words of one syllable.

Everywhere the eye travels is found heralded fascinating announcement of prizes, all kinds and varieties of prizes imaginable. Just a few of them are peace prizes, journalism prizes, essay prizes, art prizes, prize novels, prize plays, prize names, harmonica prizes, art prizes, scholarship prizes, the Nobel prize, marble prizes, athletic prizes, puzzle prizes, missing letter prizes, oratorical prizes, new idea prizes and countless others too numerous to enumerate. Surely there is opportunity enough for all here.

A FLOOD-CONTROL FLIGHT

DESPITE the fact that enactment of Mississippi flood-control legislation is regarded as one of the imperative tasks awaiting the seventieth congress, there are grave difficulties in the way of its accomplishment. There are three schools of thought regarding the form the legislation should take asserts the Public Ledger. The first group would combine flood control with navigation aids by strengthening the long chain of levees. The second group favors storage dams and reservoirs at the headwaters of all streams feeding the Mississippi, regardless of the effect upon navigation. The third group would use impounded flood waters to generate hydro-electric power and irrigate farms. In these groups are to be found reminders of the pork barrelers, the power developers and the conservationists. Congress will need strong leadership to prevent politics from delaying, if not blocking, the enactment of flood-control legislation.

FOREST CONSERVATION

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE from his Black Hill abode can look about him in almost any direction and obtain the best kind of evidence proving that scientific forest management, which should be carried on to a much greater extent, pays big dividends.

President Cleveland was responsible for the creation of the 1,000,000 and more acres of national forest in the Black Hills. The creation almost caused Cleveland's impeachment, but every one of the yellow pines in the area today is a monument to his farsightedness says an exchange. Soon after the government took over the area, the first scientifically managed lumber sale was conducted under United States forests. Today, all this land that was then cut over is almost ready for another sale of timber. It is on this principle of repeated crops that the forests are administered. They will thus always be perpetual reservoirs of timber products.

Immediate farm relief, which the president will tackle with prairie farmers, is a pressing problem, beyond all doubt, but just as important for the future is wise forest conservation. If the president does no more all summer than see how well forest conservation in the Black Hills has paid in the last 30 years, his voyage of discovery into the Dakotas will not have been in vain.

Sun sets tonight 7:28. Sun rises tomorrow 4:45.

No man harbors a likker making still for ornamental purposes.

Some of the murderers seem to go crazy when they think they are going to have their wind shut off.

Some birds just seem to want to dive into the most congested parts. You can get an idea of this at the corner of Washington and Mercer street. We saw a bozo fly up Mercer street, go down North to Jefferson and from there to the Diamond. He could have gone down Washington street straight in half the time. On Falls street where the new hotel is being built they go ramming through endangering the lives of the men who work there when there are two ways around easier. We saw one yap wait five minutes there the other day and then go up the alley and park near Grant street. No brains!

A great many grown men had forgotten about the Black Hills until President Coolidge went there on his vacation. Wild Bill, Deadwood Dick, Buffalo Bill and a lot of other famous characters used to make that country famous through the nickle library.

No man ever built up a big business working eight hours a day or less. All big enterprises have been built by men who paid no attention to the flight of time, but they worked hard all the time six days a week and 52 weeks in a year for years and years. They did not know what the face of a clock looked like.

Twenty-five prisoners in a West Virginia jail are in solitary confinement and on bread and water because they refused to go out and work on the roads. Not all jails are nice cool roosting places. The public roads seem to be the logical places for crooks to work out their keep.

A young lady in a West Virginia district court was ordered by the judge to leave the witness stand and adjust her clothing properly. She had her stockings rolled to a considerable extent below her knees and her skirts —or skirt—was very short. Judges can get real fussy when they want to and there is no comeback. The sheriffs usually hang around handy to take a hand.

The principal of a high school in Georgia was convicted by a jury for being one of a party who whipped a woman because she did not go to church. Some people have queer ideas of ways of making people go to church. Advertising in The News is the best way we think.

We noticed a communication in this newspaper signed by J. J. Burns and J. L. Maxwell last Friday. It was stated in one place that the Chamber of Commerce was "making a constant cry about patronizing home industries." That is quite correct and The News is probably more to blame for that laudable cry than any other institution in New Castle. However we notice that J. J. Burns does not have his name enrolled as a member of the Chamber of Commerce, but we are glad to note that the name of Mr. Maxwell is there. Come into the city John and read the daily papers. We want all the business we can get for New Castle and it costs the writer several hundred dollars a year to back up his opinion along that line.

Mother and Dad.
(Words by Minnie Johns.)

Of course, you've heard so many songs about mother dear,
But seldom do we ever hear a chant
of daddy dear;
Upon his face where toil has wrought
the furrows plain to see,
Are symbols of his cares and hopes of fame for you and me.
(Chorus)
So don't forget your dear old dad, as you course the stream of life,
And link his name with mother's, for
he, too, was in the strife
To cultivate with highest aims a
character sublime,
Far better than wealth or structures
which crumble in time.

Dear mother, you're a jewel rare, of splendor unsurpassed—
An old-fashioned mother, whose love
will stand the test,
But still another sparkling gem presents itself to view,
Its name is linked with mother's—for
'daddy" that means you.

Automobiles Booming.
American Boys and Girls.
Trouble in Vienna.
Beware the "Black Widow"

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1927, By N. Y. American, Inc.

The "saturation point" in automobiles seems as far off as ever. For the first six months of 1927 General Motors sold 840,481 cars, against 620,190 in 1926 and 396,360 in 1925. An increase of 74,000 cars a month in two years is not bad.

The big motor boom and fight are expected in the autumn when Henry Ford's new car will make its bow. Ford is quoted to the effect that the country can easily absorb two million new cars every year, since, at the present rate of car ownership, that would mean every car would have to last six years.

Ford knows that 2,000,000 new cars a year is a ridiculously low estimate. Will Rogers describes a poor family as a family "having only one car." And that is not exaggeration.

Every active individual, including bigger children in prosperous families, needs his own car, and the four-car family will soon be numerous. Two cars to a family should be the average. To say that four million cars, trucks, etc., can easily be absorbed in this country every year is putting it mildly, assuming, of course, that intelligent advertising is done in valuable newspapers, such as this one.

Bobby Jones once more proves the quality of young men from Georgia. Twice in succession he wins the British open championship, proving himself the best golf player in the world. In winning he broke all records, playing seventy-two holes over the difficult Scotch course in 285 strokes. The best previous record was 291.

Disturbing news comes from Vienna. The mob burned and sacked the ministry of justice, and a general strike paralyzes the entire city. Many were killed by machine guns in the streets.

Socialist leaders, it is said, "lost control of their followers." They had planned "to stage a demonstration." And even the mayor of Vienna, a member of the Socialist party, could not control his associates, once they started.

Matthew Woll, who has just called upon the workers of all nations to form a world trade union, based upon American trade union plans and procedures, is a vice president of the American Federation of Labor and for more than 20 years has been president of the International Photo-Engravers' Union. He was an understudy to the late Samuel Gompers, and became known as the Crown Prince from the general assumption that Mr. Gompers had picked him to succeed to the presidency of the American Federation of Labor. He is a small, businesslike man with a practical and well informed mind. He is regarded as a progressive in the labor movement and was credited with having induced Mr. Gompers to support the program of the Workers' Education Bureau. His present move for a world trade union is based on his belief that world problems are being more effectively dealt with by industrial factors than by political institutions.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

A LITTLE GEOGRAPHY

Geography is still taught in the public schools. The public schools may be a little weak in Latin, Greek and mathematics, the studies which develop the youthful brain into a mature, rational mind, but the pupils still draw maps. I remember very early in life having been presented at Christmas time with a dissected map of the United States. It was not long until I knew the name of every state within the Union then, the capitals of those states, the rivers that ran through these states, and in fact a great deal about the geography of the Nation, for I put that map together a great many times. It was one of my chief amusements to get some playmate to try to do the same thing. Since that time I have given away a great many dissected maps of the United States upon the occasion of a birthday or a Christmas party of some youngster of my acquaintance.

Just now a chain of popular restaurants has covered the back of its menus with a printed map of the United States. Upon this map are red dots, indicating the location of the restaurants belonging to the company. The manager of one of these restaurants has experienced great difficulty in keeping his tables supplied with menus. His patrons had apparently developed an appetite for the bill of fare—at least they frequently carried it away with them. He conducted an investigation, and discovered that this curious demand had originated in a bet. A patron with gambling inclinations and an eye to business had shown this map to an acquaintance, and wagered that his friend could not name everyone of the 48 states which were outlined upon the map. The bet was snapped up and promptly lost. Intent on revenge, the loser determined to recoup his loss by trying the game on a friend of his. This betting became like the chain letter—very widespread, in the community where the restaurant was located. Hence the demand for menus.

If it is not possible for every good citizen of the United States to draw maps showing the boundaries of the states, with reasonable accuracy, how many can draw a map of Europe and show the boundaries of the European states? How many have the slightest notion of how many states there are in Mexico? Or how many cantons there are in Switzerland. An American can travel all over Europe and never realize that within the nations of Europe are geographical states very similarly governed as are the states of the Union.

The citizen would enjoy the reading of literature and history a great deal better if he would study a little more geography.

The only truly happy people are too darned busy to wonder whether or not they are happy.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Occasioned by the recent sentence of Mrs. Snyder and her paramour, for the murder of her husband, a discussion has broken out again in regard to capital punishment.

The judge who sentenced the victims said that he sentenced them to death because it was the law, but in his judgment it was a bad law, as he did not believe in capital punishment.

Almost every phase of this question has been discussed. It has been repeatedly asserted by both sides that capital punishment does and does not deter crime. Advocates for a stricter punishment of criminals clamor for the death penalty, while the advocates of civilization clamor for the contrary.

There is just one point in this discussion that seems to have been overlooked, and that is, the difference between punishment and vengeance.

We are all shocked by brutal murders and are all quite willing that the perpetrators should be punished, quickly and condignly. It is not a question of sympathy for the murderer. No sob stuff enters into the argument.

The question is, what is punishment?

Killing a man is not punishment. It is vengeance. Killing is too good and too merciful for most murderers. The pain is short.

There ought to be some other form of punishment. That form exists when you sentence to the penitentiary for life. This sentence should be irrevocable unless the criminal is found to be guiltless.

And the pardoning power should not be in the hands of the governor. He has plenty to do without adding that burden to his already manifold duties.

It should be in the hands of a commission duly appointed by the governor and responsible for its actions.

If life imprisonment can be made secure and the possibility of pardon be made difficult, if not impossible, fewer people would demand capital punishment.

After all, the object of the whole matter is to protect society, not to wreak vengeance upon the criminal.

It is punishment we desire and not retaliation.

TWO EIGHTS AND A NINE

"Two eights and a nine and a ninety-two!
Not a bad card if you'll look it through.
There are several pars, and a birdie three,
I'd call it a very good game for me",
So the golfer said, as he showed his score
And I smiled for I'd heard it so oft before.

"Two eights and a nine!" as the game is played
For eighteen holes must the score be made
And the course is long and the traps are deep,
And the fairways narrow and hard to keep,
But those three bad holes very plainly tell
That most of the time he had labored well.

Oh, many a day have I spoiled my score
With an eight or nine, or even more.
I have shot my pars and my birdies, too,
To blunder and fall ere the day was through
And the eights and the nine, somehow it seems
Have always happened to wreck my dreams.

And the card is good, though the score is high
For the course is long, so it's vain to sigh.
But perhaps when the game of life is played
And I go above with the score I've made
Those eights and nines will be understood
If most of the way I've been fairly good.

C. B. D. — CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

IN NEW YORK

The highest point along the Atlantic coastline, according to the guides, is on Staten Island, within New York City, where a hill overlooking the Narrows rises about 432 feet above sea level.

That isn't very high, measuring by back-country standards. It isn't high enough to furnish much climate in the summer. It doesn't lift one above the fogs on a muggy day.

But New York is going to have climate. On Forty-second street, within view of my office window, they are already moving stocks and tenants out of a long line of store and loft buildings, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, where the Larkin Tower is going to rise.

This building, according to plans already officially approved, is to be 110 stories high. That will take the imposing tower away above the 1,000-foot level, so long touched by only one structure made by humans—the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

Climate certainly ought to begin somewhere below 1,000 feet. That lofty altitude ought to take one up above the heat of summer days and the ground-mists that make hot days humid.

Certainly, there will be decidedly different weather at the top of that building, during much of the year, than you will find at the street level. Really, 1,000 or 1,200 feet makes quite a difference. I remember motoring up the mountains in Porto Rico, to an altitude no higher than that, and finding the weather pleasantly cool and invigorating, while the valleys were stewing in torrid heat.

There will be a good deal of careful watching of this latest venture in sky-scraping. If the thing is a practical success, we will not have to wait long for a building 120 stories high. And that, if the practical results are still holding steady, the office building of 150 stories will be merely another step toward the clouds.

Just as soon as it is demonstrated that it is practical to build far enough into the sky to provide substantial changes in climate, the sky-scraping apartment houses will begin to rise. Forty stories is now considered a rather dizzy height for apartment houses. Ten years hence you'll find the really exclusive families provided with summer town homes a hundred and thirty stories above the hot pavements.

Mellett Murder Rewards Now Hold Interest

(International News Service)

CANTON, O., July 18.—The curtain having dropped on the Don Mellett murder trials, attention was centered today upon the distribution of rewards to those who played prominent parts in unraveling the veil of mystery which surrounded the case a year ago.

William Betzler of Massillon and Steve Kascholk of Nanty Glo, Pa., were reported in line for a part of the several thousand dollars offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of the slayers of the Canton publisher, while Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective ace, is said to be entitled to a generous share of the sum.

A close watch was being maintained today over Saranus A. Lengel, former Canton police chief, convicted Saturday of complicity in the Mellett slaying. Lengel faces life imprisonment and has been quoted as saying: "I don't care to live now." He slept very little Saturday night, according to authorities.

She is shown wearing an advanced dress of French importation. The dull and shiny satin give it a distinctive effect, and the scarf bow and V-neck line are helpful touches.

COURT GRANTS SANDERS PETITION

Petition of Clyde Sanders, trading as the New Castle Silk mills, that the mechanics liens secured against that concern in the interests of George O. Michael and the Ideal Concrete Products company be stricken off and the rule for the plaintiff to show cause why the claims presented by them should not be stricken off, was granted by the court this morning.

It was shown by the defendant in his petition that he had petitioned the court on June 3, 1927, and a rule had been granted on the defendant to show cause why the judgments or claims should not be stricken off, the answer to be returnable the first Monday in July, that Attorney Joseph S. W. Smith, counsel for the plaintiffs, had accepted service on June 18 and that no answer had been filed.

The amounts sought were $125 by Michael and $209.56 by the Ideal Concrete Products company. Under the order issued the claims are not allowable and are stricken off. The contract for the construction of an addition to the plant of the silks mills was let to L. E. Musser and the persons seeking to collect furnished labor and materials for the building.

Sharp Is Lodged In City Bastile

Patrolman William James had a hunch for a long time that a person giving the name of Frank Sharp was violating the law and whenever Patrolman James strolled in South Mercer street he let his eye rest upon him, providing the latter happened in the thoroughfare.

Last night he did not see Sharp but he did see two men enter 42 South Mercer street and he summoned other officers who carried a search warrant and a little more than a quart of alleged whiskey was found in Sharp's place, according to the police report of the incident.

Today Chief of Police Henry Dysart said he would swear out a warrant charging Sharp with violation of the Snyder Act.

Oscar Wuckibich, docketed at the police station on a charge of 'suspicion" is also alleged to have flirted with the beverage that incurs the displeasure of policemen. He is said to have been in an automobile and as yet his status has not been established.

Congress To Get Committee Report On National Immigration Centers

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 18.—A national survey of immigration centers with a view to suggesting increased appropriations where necessary for general improvement of the service is now being made by a congressional committee.

Ellis Island, the gateway through which millions have passed before becoming residents of this country has already beeen examined by the committee which is headed by Representative Milton Schreve, of Pennsylvania.

Other members of the committee are Assistant Secretary R. C. White, assistant director of the budget Melvin Jones and Representatives William B. Oliver, of Alabama and Anthony J. Griffin, of New York.

Approve Ellis Island

When interviewed at Ellis Island, the members of the committee expressed satisfaction at conditions there. The center, the survery board found, is practically self-supporting. The income derived from the $3 per head tax paid by all aliens arriving in this country is more than sufficient to take care of the immigration administration at the port of New York.

Representative Schreve stated that the tour which will be made along the northern border and the Pacific Coast, is not being made for investigation purposes, but merely as a study by the administrative and legislative branches of the government of the present needs of the immigration service.

Schreve pointed out that the chief problem faced by the committee is in the exercise of increased vigilance along the border to prevent illegal entry and smuggling of aliens. Deportation of such aliens and also of those who are already in penal institutions is another activitiey which the committee will examine.

Would Deport Many

At the present time there are 150,000 aliens in various institutions who should be deported, according to Assistant Secretary White. The United States deportaed 12,000 aliens last year, White added, of which number 4,000 passed through the port of New York.

The main work of the immigration service at the present time, White asserted, is the detention and deportation of smuggled aliens. In the last year of a total of $6,538,000 appropriated for the immigration service $1,500,000 alone was spent on the border patrol to combat a growing trade of bootlegging aliens across the border. Between 200,000 and 300,000 prospective immigrants are waiting in Canada for a chance to enter this country, he stated.

Harvesting Wheat In Kansas

"Combines" Rule Fields While Threshing Machines Sit Idle

By Walter C. Gumbel, Master Penn State Grange, of Ellwood City, R. D. No. 1

When it comes to the multiplicity of lives, Kansas wheat has the well known feline backed off the map.

The cat, from time immemorial, has boasted of nine lives, and got away with it. But King wheat has at least a score, and up until this time it has remained a deep dark secret.

No one knows how many times the crop has been killed off. Hail, judging from reports, took most of it, then a new malady, strange, devastating electricity, took it again. The Hessian fly and kindered pests destroyed a big proportion. It was drowned and dried out.

The Wheat Comes Back.

If the farmers could have harvested all the crops that were destroyed at various times during the winter and spring, they could have harvested a hundred bushels per acre. As it is they probably will have to get along with an average of twelve to eighteen bushels per acre.

The wheat came back, gloriously and is waving today in golden profusion throughout the greater part of Kansas and the wheat belt—that part which has not already been attacked by the combines, headers and binders, the modern implements of harvesting. There are many thousands of acres of it, miles of it, running and swaying north and south, east and west.

Plains A Golden Hue.

Never was there a view so magnificient and inspiring as the great level plains covered with fields of grain, every field ripe and yellow in the sun, and so level that one, to use the homely expression, "could almost shoot a marble across the top of it."

Could that first Kansas pioneer, the Spanish Coronado, who tramped these regions many years ago looking for the many fabled cities, have stood on high and looked out over the country side, when the sun was at its zenith, he probably would have said that he had found the country paved with gold.

Combines Drive Ahead.

In the big wheat country where the farms run from 160 to 20,000 acres the combine, a machine that cuts and threshes the ripe grain in one operation, has resolved itself into a place of prominence. It seems to be sure to supercede the header and binder as the auto was to replace the horse and buggy.

The headers are fast being turned to the scrap heap all through the country while the combines with their gaudy colors of red and green, their canvases trimmed and their reels shinning sit in the yards "waiting." One may also see or hear them moving across the field, their engines humming and their reels dipping into the golden grain.

With the header, the threshing machine is also being turned to the scrap heap. Those former outfits, which could take all the wheat eight or ten men could shove into its never filled jaws are almost relics of the wheat belt. One sees them sitting about uncovered and exposed to the weather.

Harvest Hands Loose.

The combine threatens to put another "element" on the side. That is the harvest hand. Harvesting is getting to be almost a family affair. With a combine, the wheat grower can drive the tractor, his son, if he has one, can operate the combine. The principal duty is to oil up and control the sickle-bar so it does not run into the ground, and a second son can take care of the wheat, which is carried to the top of the machine, from where it is carried into a wagon when filled.

Curtain Draws Down.

This year the big harvest army found itself all ready with no place to go because of a late season. But harvesting would not be justified without the picturesque array of tramps, dry goods store clerks, college students, floaters and what not.

Among all these men, the "old time" harvest hand likes to get off into a corner and tell by hour his exploits in taming a wild pair of mules. There's the boy making the harvest the first time, who listens in open-mouthed amazement.

The never forgotten character always lingers. They've been playing in the drama of the many years, but it seems as if the curtain is about to be brought down on their act. Modern implements will always tend to supererecede the old.

PETERS ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

By Florence Smith Vincent

AT NIGHT ON THE CANAL

"Suppose you should not get there before I do and your friends should think I had no business on the banks of the canal! They might rush at me before I had a chance to explain things. Hadn't we better go together?" Peter was doubtful about setting forth alone.

No reply from Beaver.

"Why don't you answer me, B. Z.?" demanded the Boy. "Why, where are you, old fellow? I can't see you for the shadows!"

Still no word. Peter peered into the darkness. Not a sign of his former companion, but close to the bank the Boy saw the water rippling in the dimness; heard it lapping against the shore and he knew then what had happened.

"The old skeezicks! B. Z. has slipped into the pond just as his wife did and is swimming toward the canal. He might have told me he was going to. Provoking beast! He will get there long before I do and maybe he'll not wait for me. "I'd hate to meet those Beavers on their own ground. From what Mrs. B. Z. said they all hate Two-Legs and may welcome the opportunity to pay back old scores against my race."

"There is one thing about it, though, if I don't take a chance I am not going to see the builders at work and I wouldn't miss that for the world. Suppose I do get a bite or two, it will be worth it."

"Pshaw! I do wish it was not so dark. I hate to go prowling about in strange places at night! If I was a cat, now, I would like nothing better. Ouch! Stubbed my toe the first thing. Well, I can't get lost, anyhow. All I have to do is to follow the water line until I come to a bend in the bank. And there I am now, unless I am very mistaken. Just saved myself from tumbling into the water. Whew! Wht a crowd of the furry folk. I know now why they say 'busy as a Beaver'."

It was no wonder that the Boy was surprised. Dark as it was Peter could see dim forms scurrying hither and thither. Some were on the water and some were on the land, but all were working at top-notch speed as if their very lives depended upon it.

DARK AS IT WAS THE BOY COULD SEE SCURRYING FIGURES

"Well, I see you got here all right", said a voice close by, and turning Peter found B. Z. Beaver at his side. "I have wasted about all the time this evening that I can afford, so if you will excuse me I will join the rest of the builders as soon as I have told you what is what. Have you noticed the canal? It is about two feet wide and when it is finished, if all goes well and we have no setbacks, it will be nearly one hundred feet long."

"Is the water very deep?" asked Peter curiously.

"Two feet—not so deep here as by the dam. But it wouldn't be well for a baby fox to venture in. He'd find it over his head. Notice that fellow with the mud under his chin?"

"Yes. What is he going to do with it? Cement the sides of the canal?" The Boy had guessed right.

"Exactly", declared B. Z. The chap swimming along behind him is floating that bit of wood, pushing it before him. Two other Beavers are picking out stray bits of bark—the waters of the canal are sluggish and must be kept clear. And the ones making all that noise are chopping away some thick roots that left alone would make the stream too narrow!"

Next: "All That Was Left of the Dam."

BRITTON'S

Dependable Dry Cleansing

Your Member Of Congress

By H. C. HUNTER Secretary to HON J. H. SWICK At Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18.—Aviation and armament promise to receive much consideration at the hands of the 70th congress, judging from the voices of leaders in both houses who are following the sentiment of the public in both problems which have become major topics of the day.

Feats of trans-Atlantic and Pacific fliers, have recalled the prophetic utterances of Col. Billy Mitchell to members of both houses compelling them to consider seriously this new force which brings America within a day's travel of Europe and the Orient; banishing the age old comfort of seclusion, in which we were once content to feel secure.

The apparent deadlock at Geneva, where Great Britain, Japan and the United States are unable to reach an agreement on naval armaments, if continued without a resultant truce in navy building, has already caused the "Big Navy" men" in both the house and senate to serve notice on the World Powers, that they will launch a drive for a more adequate national defense, at the next session of congress.

It is recalled that only through the promise of the administration to press for a general reduction of armament, was the president able to head off the Bigger Navy forces in congress at the last session.

His spokesman in both houses pleaded with the "adequate" defense forces, who were admitedly in control to hold up the navy building program until the Geneva conference was held.

National defense, as interperted by those who speak for aviation and naval exponents, resolves itself into the creation of an efficient fighting machine, consisting of fleets of modern heavier than air craft and fast battle cruisers.

It is generally conceded that the heavily armored super-dreadnaught of yesterday, has become obsolete in modern warfare, giving way to the battle cruiser, carrying large calibre guns equipped with fighting planes and sacrificing armor for high speed.

The government recently accepted a new type plane, hailed as the most advanced fighting machine yet perfected, which carries six machine guns and more than a ton of bombs. This new acquisition along with the proposed derigible, construction of which has been authorized marks a new era in national defense which is becoming more prominent now than at any time since the World War.

Kansas Builds Natural Gas Helium Plant

Million-Dollar Factory Under Construction Is Second In Country

Will Supply Government With Large Part Of Gas For Dirigibles

ARKANSAS CITY, Kansas, July 18—Construction has started on a plant for the extraction of helium from natural gas, at Dexter, near here. The plant will be the second in the United States for the manufacture of helium gas, and will be built at a cost of $1,000,000. The first and only such plant in the United States at present, is located at Fort Worth, Tex.

The plant at Dexter is being built by the Kentucky Oxygen and Hydrogen company.. Contracts have been signed with the United States government to supply the government with a large part of the gas.

In Big Field

The helium field is said to extend for several miles in all directions from Dexter. The field was discovered during the world war, at which time the government made a survey and announceed plans for the construction of a plant there. However, the end of the war culminateed the existing demand for the gas and the plans were dropped.

Helium gas is non-inflammable and for that reason one of the most valuable so far discovered. Its most important use thus far is for the inflation of balloons and dirigibles.

In Natural Gas

Professor H. P. Cady, head of the department of chemistry of the University of Kansas, is the scientist who first discovered the gas as a component of natural gas. He was experimenting on samples from Dexter wells when he made this remarkable contribution to aviation. Prof. Cady was interested in Dexter's experience with its natural gas twenty years ago. Wells were drilled and a good supply was piped for homes and business uses and not until then was it discovered that the gas would not burn without being primed with a kindling fire.

The natural gas at Dexter is said to contain as high as 2 per cent helium, whereas the richest of the Fort Worth wells contains only about 1 per cent.

London Society Is Becoming Worried By 'Gate Crashers'

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, July 18—Prominent London society hostesses, alarmed at the manner in which uninvited guests—the parallel of the American "gate crasher"—are managing to worm their way into brilliant society gatherings without invitations and recommendations, are discussing measures with which to put an end to this abuse of their hospitality.

In the near future definite traps will be laid for the great army of "uninviteds" at some of the biggest parties and receptions, and what form these will take is at the moment the main topic of conversation among the leading hostesses.

The Duchess of Sutherland, wife of one of the richest peers in Britain, has led the way in the campaign by asking all guests to bring their invitation cards and refusing to receive anybody not possessing such a card. At a recent dinner and dance given at her London mansion many "gate crashers" were thwarted from entering by this means.

Since the commencement of the present London "season" so many uninvited guests have turned up at private house parties that rooms and passage ways have been congested and the organization all but ruined. When receptions have been held at hotels, they have burst in in even greater numbers.

The practice of the uninvited person when challenged is to say that he or she was brought by Mr. So-and-So—always a person who has been noticed leaving. Mr. So-and-So being out of reach the hostess has no other alternative but to allow his alleged guest to remain.

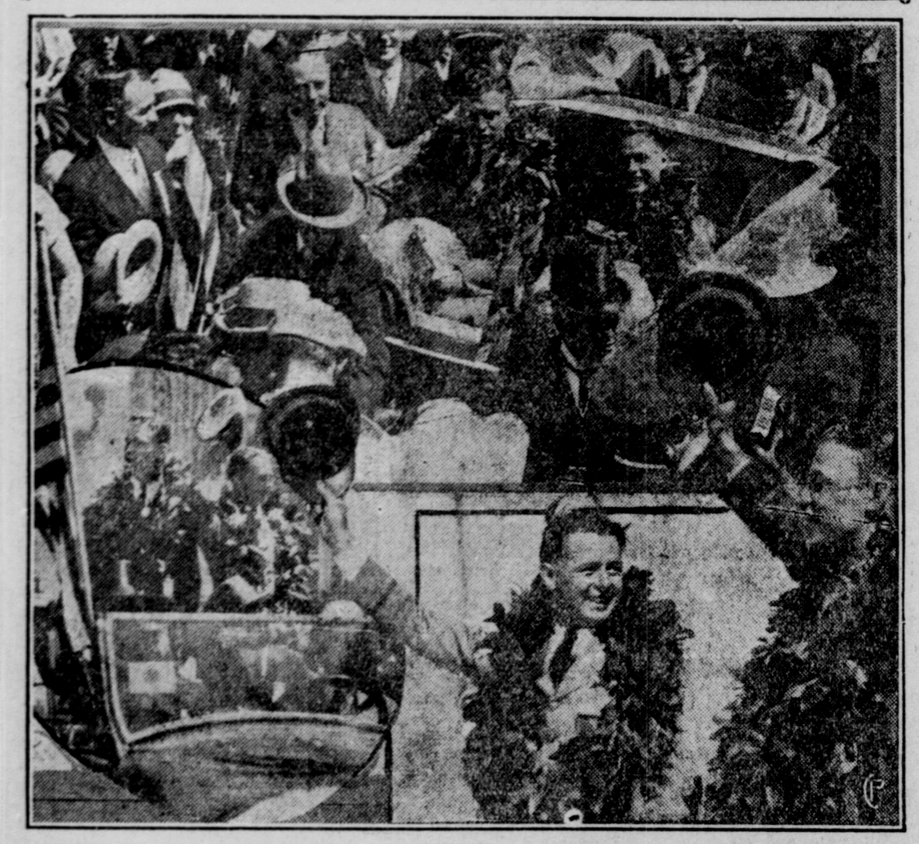
SAN FRANCISCO ACCLAIMS RETURNED FLYERS



Not to be outdone by any other city, San Francisco demonstrates in its tumultuous greeting to the returned army non-stop Hawaiian flyers, Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert F. Hegenberger, what a royal welcome it can give. Top picture shows the flyers being greeted by Mayor James Rolph (high silk hat) in his auto, as the parade of triumph started up Market Street between cheering thousands. Lower left photo shows Lieutenants Hegenberger (left) and Maitland as they appeared when the procession had made its way through a mile of humanity; lower right, Hegenberger (left) and Maitland wearing floral wreaths dropped to deck of steamer from Honolulu by aerial escort of army planes.

HUSKIES DEVELOP COACHES

Rusty Callow's decision to leave his alma mater to coach crew at Pennsylvania on a reported ten-year contract at from $12,000 to $15,000 a year makes a total of 14 former Husky oarsmen holding down similar positions in large universities and colleges throughout the country. Photos above show Callow, Fred Spuhn, another former Husky whom Callow is scheduled to replace at Pennsylvania, and Al Ulbrickson, the assistant coach at Washington, who is expected to step into Callow's shoes at the western institution. Ulbrickson is looked upon as the best stroke ever produced at Washington. He has been assistant coach since his graduation a year ago.

CHICAGO FACES LOSS OF SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Announcement has been made that Chicago's famous symphony orchestra would be disbanded immediately because the musicians' union, headed by James Petrillo, president, presented a new scale, which would increase the pay of each of the 90 orchestra members from $80 to $100 a week. Backers agreed to meet the increase if the orchestra were reduced to keep the payroll at the same level, but this was rejected. Petrillo may get other backers. Above are the leaders of the musicians' union, as they entered the final conference in Chicago: Left to right, A. M. Elrod, C. A. Baumann, J. C. Petrillo, president; Sylvester Kloss, E. A. Benkert and Leo Jawarowski.

WHEN 'PONY EXPRESS' ARRIVED

Clyde Jones, chief of the Custer State Park rangers, who rode the last lap of the "pony express" on a horse named Calvin Coolidge, is shown delivering his message to the President at the state game lodge in the Black Hills of South Dakota. The message, from Governor Frank G. Emerson of Wyoming, invited the President to attend the Frontier Days' celebration to be held at Cheyenne in August.

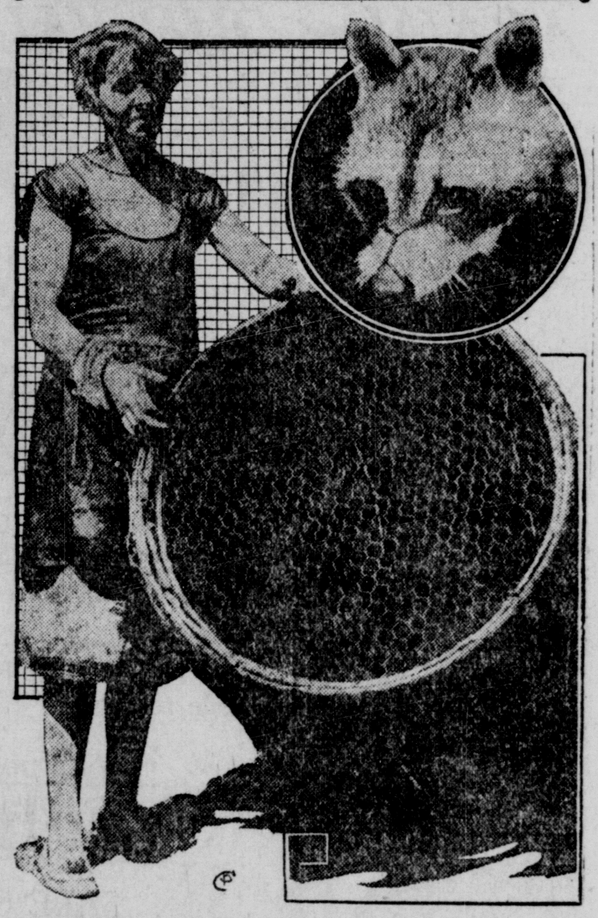
CAPTURES MINK BAREHANDED



Mrs. Blanche Larsen, of Salt Lake City, Utah, is proudly exhibiting a mink which she captured barehanded and unaided while the animal was raiding her chicken coop. Mrs. Larsen discovered the marauder as he was making his way into the coop through a small wall. She grabbed his hind legs and although badly bitten and scratched managed to hold on. She is shown above with the barrel in which she is trying to tame the mink. Inset shows the captured thief.

CHAMP BARES JOKE WEDDING

Helen Wainwright, famous swimming star, says her marriage to Clifford Holland (inset), organist in an Oklahoma City theatre, was a "joke," and is seeking an annulment. She explains that on being teased because she was seen in Holland's company she bought a ten-cent wedding ring and wore it. The manager of the show in which she was appearing announced a wedding, and Helen and Holland, to avoid unpleasant talk, were wed.

Hundred More Scouts Go To Camp Today

Sunday may have been the close of a large camping period, but a larger one opens today at Camp John M. Phillips. Over a hundred scouts from all over the country are due to arrive for the last scout camping period of the season. From the looks of the registration list presented today, it will take all the available space in the camp to hold the new commers.

According to Scout exective J. Lee Calahan, and LeRoi M. Norton; the scouts who arrive in camp today will start in the regular camping routine, but there will be new features in games and scouting. A new and carefully constructed tennis court will come into use this period, and moving pictures of the first two periods of camp, showing the scouting progress made during the early part of the camping season, will be shown during this period.

Dozen Non Swimmers Swimming

At least a dozen non swimming scouts were taught swimming during the period of camp just closed. Most of the boys have never had an opportunity to know anything about swimming before they came to Camp Phillips. When they went there was not a scout among the non swimmers, who could not handle himself in the water.

Indian Village Progresses

Almost phenominal progress in wood lore, and out door life has been made during the last period in the Indian Village at Camp Phillips. Sleeping quarters in the Village was no longer a problem after some of the scouts conceived the idea of hanging their blankets on poles making a bed something like a hammock. New bridges and a large leanto for the chief of the village were constructed during the period.

Camp Fire Saturday Night

Scouts entertained scouts at Saturday evening's farewell camp fire, which was the last meeting of the scouts in the period just closed. Some very interesting and original stunts were provided by the stockades. Each Stockade presented its own stunts.

John "Baldy" Watson, Stockade leader, and former leading tumbler at Ben Franklin Junior High performed some breath taking stunts at the farewell camp fire. "Baldy" is noted for his ability as a swimmer and diving artist, but it rather took away the audience' breath when he performed some of the dives on the hard board platform of the camp stage. Some expressed the opinion that he belonged to the bird family.

"The Light House", a fantasy presented by the New Bedford scouts was something new and clever on the program.

Kenneth Balmer, as "Sam the Banjo Man", and his assistants Bill McKim and Don Kamperman proved excellent song and dance entertainers. This troupe belongs in Ellwood City.

Charles Dungan, harmonica artist from Mahoningtown is certainly an artist on his chosen instrument. He rendered several popular selections for his audience.

Honor Men For Period

Bill McKim presented 710 honor points for the second period of camp making him honor man of the period. Ed Jenkins rated a score of 510 honor points for the period. This placed him as second honor man.

Both of the honor men were inhabitants of the Indian village and did most of their work there during the period.

Staff vs Camp Base Ball Game

The camp staff challeneged the camp to a base ball game. The staff said it would win. The staff did win, but the score was 12-11, and the staff had to sweat for the winning point.

Evidently the camp's best team was wise for it let the staff run away with the honors in the first of the game, and then rallied at the last and nearly carried away the honors.

The staff: Noton, Casillo, Stone, Ropp, Watson, McClaren, Boston, Brown, Malandro, Frye, Greer, McWilliams.

The camp: Farver, Turk, Wilson, Wettich, Dungan, Cunningham, Howells, Jameson, Harris.

Miss Bina M. West, founder and supreme commander, will preside at all the sessions and officers will be elected for the next four-year term. This state will be represented by Mrs. Mary T. Hardwick, Uniontown; Mrs. Ada R. Stone, Butler; Miss Minnie Biggar, Erie; Mrs. Hester Coslett, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Charlotte Sprucebank, Harrisburg; Mrs. E. Olive Eckert, Scranton; Mrs. Jennie Eadie, McKeesport.

It was organized by Miss Bina M. West, a young Michigan school teacher, 35 years ago, and a steady progress has attended its business and fraternal efforts through all these years.

The convention proper will be held in the beautiful administration building of the W. B. A. summer camp estate on Lake Huron beach, which has every facility for accommodating of this historic gathering of delegates and the hundreds of guests who will attend. Plans for the next four years will be mapped out and a progressive program of new insurance and social features will be introduced for consideration.

B. & O. PUTS SHOPMEN ON FULL-TIME WEEK, ON MONTHLY FURLOUGH

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 18.—The 23,000 shopmen of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad who have been on a five and a half day week schedule since April 15, have had the half day restored, but have been put on four days a month furlough, according to notice sent the shop crafts by George H. Emerson, Baltimore, chief of motive power and equipment.

The action restoring the half day caused the report that full time had again been inaugurated. Emerson in his letter says: "We have, compared with last year, an eight per cent decrease in commercial loading and so far in July, compared with June, we have a decrease of 15 per cent in the average daily loaded movement. This makes it necessary to revamp our expenditures and curtail."

Synthetic Gasoline Will Save Motorists Huge Sums Is Claim

(International News Service)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., July 18.—Synthetic gasoline, free from sulphur compounds, can now be made and eventually will save motorists $50,000,000 annually, Dr. Hans Tropsch of the Kaiser Wilhelm institute, Mulheim Ruhr, Germany, told the American Chemical society here today.

Dr. Tropsch said that the laboratory with which he is connected has been able to produce all the useful compounds present in petroleum from carbon monoxide and hydrogen. The laboratory has been able to duplicate nature's method of forming petroleum but excluding non-desirable elements.

The present method of extracting gasoline from crude oil, according to Dr. Tropsch, makes necessary an expenditure amounting to approximately 50 millions to eliminate sulphur products.

This cost is saved in the synthetic product, Tropsch explained, in addition, he said, the synthetic gas is free from resinifying substances.

More Bank Mergers Aim Of Cameron

(International News Service)

LEBANON, Pa., July 18.—More bank mergers in Pennsylvania and fewer banks—these today were believed to be the aims of Peter G. Cameron, State Secretary of Banking, as a result of his action in discouraging the efforts of prominent citizens here to organize a new banking and trust company, with a capital of $250,000.

The movement, headed by G. H. Moyer, former member of the State legislature, and a group of associates, is to be abandoned in view of Cameron's stand, made known after 200 citizens had subscribed for stock in the venture.

Lengel To Start Term On Friday

CANTON, O., July 18.—Seranus A. Lengel, deposed police chief, and convicted of slaying Don A. Mellet, the Canton publisher, will begin to serve his life term Friday. He will not be taken to the penitentiary until then.

When fellow prisoners at the county jail tried to console him he is reported to have said: "I don't want to live now."

The jury's verdict of murder in the first degree was a surprise to Lengel and to the rest of Canton. After the verdict he slept but little, and was morose all day Sunday. His wife and daughter are said to be on the verge of nervous prostration.

Perhaps the most dramatic scene in Canton was the reading of the old man's life sentence amid his protestations of innocence, the hysterical shriekings of his wife, and the silence of 200 spectators.

Arrest Four Negroes On Robbery Charge

Quartet With Loaded Suitcases Charged With Wampum Robbery

Four negroes Frank Thomas, Geo. Miller, Garfield Blanton and James Williams, were arrested by Constable Walter Bannon members of the Baltimore and Ohio police force and County Detective William Fleming about 10:30 Saturday night as they were walking along the railroad tracks near West Pittsburg with four heavily laden suitcases.

When the suitcases were opened they were found to contain the clothing and shirts stolen from the store of David Shapiro at Wampum early Saturday morning.

The negroes denied the theft of the stuff, claiming to have purchased it. The goods have been identified by Mr. Shapiro as that belonging to him and taken from his place.

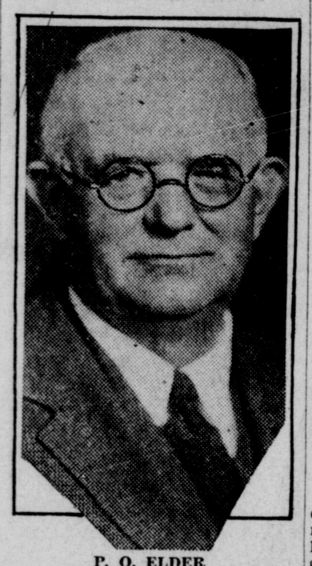
They were taken before Squire J. R. Brodbeck of West Pittsburg where charges of robbery were made against them by the county detective. They were then removed to the county jail to await a hearing which will be held later.

The men arrested were removed today to the Butler barracks of the state police where they will be photographed and fingerprinted and an investigation made as to their possible implication in other crimes of a similar nature.

They had evidently been in hiding some place between Wampum and West Pittsburg during the day until Saturday evening when they started to walk toward this city carrying the suitcases filled with the clothing, etc., taken from the Shapiro store.

Elder Candidate For County Commissioner

Second Ward Man Announces Candidacy For Republican Nomination



P. O. ELDER

I am a candidate for the office of county commissioner on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held on September 20, 1927.

I was born in Lawrence county and have lived here nearly all my life.

I have had experience in the construction of bridges and other public works and believe that the experience I have gained in this way would be useful in the event of my election to the office.

I am in favor of necessary public improvements but believe that the business of the county should be administered with economy and diligence.

If nominated and elected to the office I would give to the transaction of the county's business the most careful and intelligent attention that I would be capable of.

I will greatly appreciate any support given me.

Hackett's Summer Home To Be Sold

(International News Service)

CLAYTON, N. Y., July 18.—Sale of "Zenda," summer home of the late James K. Hackett, noted actor, is under consideration by his widow, according to word reaching her attorney, John O'Leary here.

For two years "Zenda," one of the show places of the St. Lawrence River, has not been used and the widow is said to have a feeling of not wanting to occupy the home without the famous actor-husband.

At least six New York millionaires are in the market to buy the estate in the event the widow decides to dispose of it, it is said.

ST. SWITHIN'S DAY RAINSTORMS MEAN LITTLE TO WORLD

One day last week was St. Swithin's day.

The World assigned an investigator to check up on the Swithinian legend, which says that, according to tradition, if it rains that day, it will rain for 40 days, but if the day is fair, the next 40 days will be fair.

The investigator reported that year by year, the saint was invariably wrong but that although the legend had been de-bunked every year, it still cropped up annually.

"It's just a lot of bunk," he reported.

TOO MANY PRISONERS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 18.—So many prisoners have been sent to the county jail here from mining camps in this county, that Warden David Creigh is wondering what to do before the August term of court starts. If the ratio continues some of the inmates will have to be cared for elsewhere, according to Creigh.

Only Small Amount Of Liquor From Abroad, Officials Say

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News

WASHINGTON, July 18.—"Less than 1 per cent of the liquor consumed in the United States is brought into this country from abroad."

This estimate is the treasury department's, made during the recent gathering of dry agents in Washington, for a conference with Seymour Lowman, Secretary Mellon's new assistant, already virtually in charge of prohibition enforcement and formally to succeed retiring Assistant Secretary Andrews Aug. 1.

An almost negligible quantity of the remaining 99 and a fraction per cent is "pre-war stuff."

The rest consists of illegal domestic products of various sorts—moonshine, diverted or reclaimed alcohol concoctions and what not.

The treasury department says so, at any rate.

On a 4 billion-quart basis each man, woman and child in the country, including nursing babies, averaged 33⅓ quarts of liquor, assuming a population of 120,000,000, which is a generous allowance for the continental United States.

The Anti-Saloon League disputes this and all the other figures quoted above, on several grounds.

The commerce department estimates that $40,000,000 worth of foreign liquor entered the United States last year.

Department officials say they don't mean bootleg prices.

When they speak of "$40,000,000 worth of foreign liquor," they refer to what it costs at wholesale overseas.

They don't know how much this is—say $1 a quart, for instance.

That would be 40 million quarts.

If 40 million quarts was 1 per cent—calling it a full 1 per cent, to avoid an indefinite fraction—of all the liquor the United States consumed last year, then the total national consumption was 4 billion quarts.

For one thing, the drys say the foreign price exceeds $1.

However, even if the estimated foreign wholesale rate is revised upword the problem isn't solved. At $2 America's per capita would be 16⅔ quarts; at $4—and the average certainly isn't above that—it still would be 8⅓ quarts.

The drys admit nothing like 8⅓ quarts.

The Anti-Saloon League also says liquor importations aren't nearly as large as the commerce department estimates.

Department officials stand pat that they're about right.

They actually know how much more liquor Canada and the West Indies import than in American pre-prohibition days. They declare it unbelievable that Canadians and West Indians themselves are consuming several hundred per cent more than they were consuming then, and draw the conclusion that most of the increase must be coming here.

The department explains that all it's trying to get is the correct trade balance.

Finally the drys contend that the amount of liquor smuggled into the United States is a great deal more than 1 per cent of all that's consumed.

But the treasury, too, stands pat.

It bases its estimate on its chemical analyses of the liquor it confiscates. If this seized liquor represents a cross section of all that's consumed, the treasury folk insist, then "less than 1 per cent" of imported goods is correct.

Green Presents His Protest On Nicaragua

President Of Federation Of Labor Protests Conditions In Nicaragua

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, July 18.—A protest over the "warfare" between Nicaraguan liberals and American marines was lodged with the State Department today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Green was actuated in making the protest by information supplied to him by two Nicaraguan delegates to the Pan-American labor conference, opening here today. He intimated that the public had been deceived into believing that peace had been reestablished in Nicaragua and that arrangements had been made for a new election there.

"Now it appears that bloodshed is imminent and destruction of life is seriously threatened. We shrink from contemplation of such a situation."

Green concluded his protest with a request that Secretary of State Kellogg prevent the use of American armed forces in Nicaragua.

The labor protest was sent to the department before the receipt of press dispatches from Managua telling of a sharp clash between the marines and liberals, which was reported to have resulted in nearly 100 Nicaraguans killed and wounded. One marine was reported slain and one wounded. Bombing planes manned by marine aviators figured in the clash, although to what extent has not been made clear.

(International News Service)

MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 18.—The first Pennsylvania National Guard encampment of the year entered on its final week here today after more than 20,000 persons visited the citizen-soldiers over the week-end.

Week-end recreations were saddened by the death of Private Max J. Hartig of East McKeesport, a member of the 176th field artillery of Pittsburgh, who was killed by a machine driven by George Bomberger, a visitor from Lebanon. Bomberger was held in $500 bail for further hearing.

The troops continued their routine drill and maneuvering today, many of the units being ready for advanced instruction in tactics.

Indications are that Sergt. Leonard Wilson and Corp. Charles Pearson of of the 103rd engineers, who rescued a comrade from drowning at Lake Duffy, will be given citations for bravery. HISTORIC STORIES OF COLONIAL FORT TOLD FOR ROOKIES

A view of the old fortress at Fort Niagara.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News.

FORT NIAGARA, N. Y., July 18.—Many tales, some romantic, many gruesome, are told of old Fort Niagara, the famous fortress that has guarded the Niagara frontier for more than two centuries, and Captain Stanley J. Grogan, adjutant of the 28th infantry, now stationed at the present army post, has compiled an interesting sketch of the history of the stronghold. A copy of this sketch will be presented to each C. M. T. C. candidate in training at the fort this summer.

"No one spot on the northern end of the continent," says Capt. Grogan, "was so much coveted by France and England. The objective of both these countries was to build and maintain a strong fort at the mouth of the Niagara river.

146 Years of Conflict.

"The French began operations here in 1669, and for 146 years there was in turn, peace and war, hunger and plenty, disappointment, sorrow and sadness.

"Secret pacts and treaties were made by both rival European nations with the war-like and often bloody-thirsty Indians, chiefly with the Iroquois and Senecas of western New York. Ninety years of the 146 were spent in conflict between France and England for the control of the fort and the great middle west. The second of two major attacks by the British was successful and Sir William Johnson, with his two able assistants, Joseph Branddt and John Butler, occupied the fort the greater part of the time until 1815.

British Occupation.

"During the English occupation, the fort saw its cruelest experiences. Parties of marauders were sent out from Niagara and they completely pillaged the country, scalping settlers, burning their homes and bringing back to the fort their horses, cattle and crops. Although the treaty of peace at the close of the Revolution specified that the British were to evacuate, it was not until 13 years later that the United States gained possession. But, since 1815, the Stars and Stripes have flown continuously over this famous military base.

Planned by LaSalle.

"The castle, which is now being restored by the government to its original state, was planned by LaSalle and erected in 1725-26. It was a political prison and the dungeon in the northwest end has heard the moans and hunger cries of many an unfortunate. Sometimes men were murdered and cast into the pit. Usually they were allowed to starve while gayety and mockery held sway within the same four walls.

"One of the interesting buildings on the grounds is the hot shot building, erected in 1757. In it, the cannon balls were heated and carried to the block houses and to the castle where the guns were mounted. Hot shot was dreaded as much in those days as gas was dreaded in the World war.

The Year of Starvation.

"One of the most tragic tales of the old fort is the so-called 'Year of Starvation,' os the 'Tragedy of 1687.' The Marquis de Nonville, lieutenant general in New France, had left the fort garrisoned by 100 picked men under Sieur de Troyes, promising them a ship of provisions. The Iroquois surrounded the fort and although the ship appeared, it took it two days to make port, and the provisions were spoiled. Starvation followed and only 12 men survived the terrible ordeal.

"The old fort has its ghost story, too. The story is that each night at midnight, a headless apparition arises from the poisoned well of the castle and pleads for its head. According to the legend the apparition is the ghost of a general officer in a foreign army who was beheaded and thown into the well 200 years ago."

Coal Production Shows Decrease

(International News Service)

HAZLETON, Pa., July 18.—Some hope was held here today that anthracite production at the 37 collieries of the Hazleton and Mahanoy division of the Lehigh valley operations would show considerable gain during the week over the low production reported for the week past.

Slackness in trade and the fact that several of the mines were therefore idle brought the last week's production figures down to 60 per cent below normal. Output for the week was 82,559 tons.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Restored the Health of Thousands

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 228 Schaeffer St., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at sometime in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them.

SUGGESTIONS

Handy Chairs

A practical woman had four dining room chairs with weak backs. She had the backs sawed off, leaving corner uprights six inches tall above the seat. The frames were braced so that the chairs were solid, then reupholstered and covered.

A two-inch band of the material was fastened from post to post a little above the seat, and the top of the posts finished with the turned ornamental tops that had adorned the high backs of the chairs originally for table, bridge and general usefulness. The expense of remodeling was slight.

Chamois Polisher

Besides the usual window chamois that nearly everyone uses for cleaning, there is a chamois faced mitt that is slipped over the hand for the final polishing of the glass. The mitts are also good for looking glasses and picture glasses that must be held firmly as they are wiped.

Many women are wearing the white canvas industrial gloves to save their hands when doing rough work. They are inexpensive and good for the purpose.

SUGGESTIONS

Filling the Jam Jars

Conserve—One quart red raspberries, one quart currants, one quart sour cherries, one quart gooseberries, sugar, commercial pectin. Pick over the fruit and measure it. For each cup fruit add one cup sugar. Put in a large preserving kettle and allow to stand one-half hour. Set on fire and cook for twenty minutes, add four tablespoons commercial pectin and let the mixture cook rapidly for three or four more minutes. Then pour into sterilized jars.

Conserve—Two cups pitted cherries, two cups black raspberry pulp, four cups sugar. Cook the pitted cherries in a small amount of water until the skins are tender. Wash and pick over the raspberries and mash to a pulp. Add the sugar to the berries, combine mixtures and cook rapidly until the mixture is thick and clear. Pour into sterilized jars.

The Clean Rug

Do not let anyone walk on the rug for at least 24 hours after it has been cleaned. When it is thoroughly dry it should be cleaned with a vacuum cleaner or a broom to remove the lint.

CYCLIST LOSES LIFE AFTER HITTING FENCE

TOLEDO, O., July 18.—After crashing into the fence of the Fort Miami track, Harold LeFleur, 21, of Toledo, died last night of the injuries he received. A fractured skull is believed to be the cause of his death.

Two other riders, Steve Lapkovitch, Hessville, Ind., and Robert Perry, Kalamazoo, Mich., were in the spill, but were not injured seriously.

The accident occurred during the riding of the first five mile race, when Lapovitch, who was in the lead, crashed into the fence on the first turn, the others piling on top of him.

Iowa Completes Beauty Program At State Capitol

(International News Service)

DES MOINES, Ia., July 18.—The last bit of landscape improvement, contemplated by the original plans for beautifying Iowa's capitol grounds, has been completed after a lapse of nearly 14 years and the expenditure of $10,000,000.

With the planting of several groups of dwarf pine and evergreen trees this spring the vision of the sponsors of the so-called capitol extension, which in the beginning split the state into warlike factions, has been realized.

However, the dominant instinct of an agrarian populace, always ready to acquire land, prevailed, and the capitol and other state buildings now occupy a tract of land which in many parts of the country would be regarded as a sizeable farm. Nearly 100 acres are embraced in the present grounds, the greater portion of which was acquired by purchase and condemnation beginning in 1913.

The capitol building which although nearly fifty years old, is still regarded as one of the outstanding examples of statehouse architecture, originally was set down in a tract of a few acres, overlooking railroad yards, scrap dumps, dust heaps and some of the worst of the city's slums.

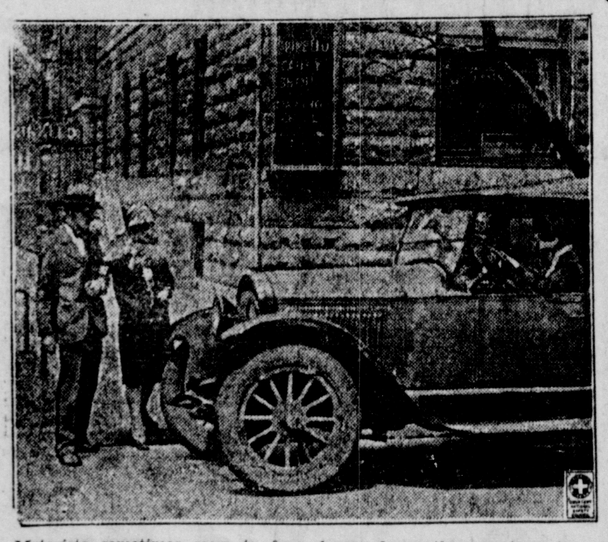
Give Pedestrian Chance



Motorists sometimes seem to forget that pedestrians have as much right as they to the right use of the streets. In making a right hand turn on a green light remember that pedestrians also have a green light. When waiting for traffic lights to change leave the crossing clear in front of your car and when driving along a curb filled with water only the most rude of drivers enjoy in giving those on the sidewalk a mud shower. People who are considerate of other folks remember the Golden Rule, comments the safety council.

One Drink And Now He's Blind

(International News Service)

YORK, Pa., July 18.—A drink of liquor, 12 hours of oblivion, and now—blindness.

This was the fate of Richard King Chesler, 19, of Tarentum, Pa., who was brought to York hospital today after a motorist found him lying by the side of the Susquehanna trail at Newberrytown, near here.

Chesler was sober, but stone blind. He said he visited Harrisburg last night and accepted a drink offered him by "a friend" in a railroad station. He could recall nothing further of the night.

Chesler was attached to the first medical regiment, in training at Carlisle barracks, and was spending a short leave in Harrisburg.

Charge Kane Was Flier Who Carried Roadhouse Bomb Thrower Last Fall

(International News Service)

WATERLOO, Ia., July 18.—Elmer Kane, aviator, was arrested here for Illinois authorities as the pilot of the airplane from which three bombs were thrown November 12 at the Charles Birger roadhouse "Shady Rest," ten miles west of Harrisburg, Ill.

In a signed statement given to Emil Steffen, of the Waterloo police department, Kane admitted his part in the bombing, for which, he said, he received one thousand dollars and a small touring car.

He stated that the bombing was plotted on the evening of November 11 in the home of Mayor Joe Adams, of West City, for whose murder Birger is now on trial. Gus Adams, Joe's brother, he said, paid him the one thousand dollars in cash.

Carl and Bernie Shelton, he said, were members of the conference in a house in West City where the bombing was plotted.

After a trip from Sparta, Ill., Kane landed his ship, by chance, he said, on the evening of November 11, near West City. Members of the Shelton gang approached him, Kane said, with the bombing proposition.

After he learned that the proposed bombs were dynamite bombs, and that the man who was going to throw them had never been in the air before and knew nothing about windage, he was convinced, he said, that the chance of hurting anyone was small.

He made a reconnaissance trip that evening, he said, and spent the night at the home of Gus Adams in West City. That night Birger gangsters, he said, swept the house with machine gun fire and he counted 42 bullet-holes in the room in which he had been sleeping. A foreigner, he said, cooked the dynamite for the bombs in the Gus Adams kitchen that night.

Kane said that an unidentified member of the Shelton gang threw the bombs. He then flew on to DuQuoin, Ill., where the bomber alighted. Kane then took off again and flew to Burksville, Ill., near Columbia.

Identification of Kane as pilot of the bombing plane came through tracing of ownership of the small touring car which was driven away from West City by H. A. Handale, a confederate of Kane. The car was found to be one stolen from Herrin, Ill.

Kane is to be returned to Illinois, according to telegraphic demand by the county attorney of Williamson county. Kane has been flying from a rented field here since last spring.

Anglers Are Cautioned On Use Of Minnows

Game Association Tells What Small Fish Can Be Taken For Bait

Under the laws of most states anglers are privileged to use minnows for bait. The question arises, what is a "minnow?" The dictionary might say it is a "small fish." The scientist would supply a long list of Latin names, unintelligible to the uncultured angler, as minnows, says the American Game Protective Association, and adds:

"The angler carelessly, or in his ignorance, takes any small fish which may come to his minnow net and uses it for bait, regardless of species. Many of them may be young game fish—bass, sunfish, perch, pike-perch, pike or even trout—the killing of which for bait is not only a violation of law, but a very wasteful practice.

"Most of these young game fish may be easily identified if carefully examined, but too many make no such examination. Anything that gets into the minnow pail is bait.

"A law defining minnows is needed in every state, but it must be expressed in such language that the ordinary garden variety of fisherman can understand what it means and be able to know what he may lawfully use. One state has a provision of law on this subject which would seem to be about what is required. It can be understood by any one. That is Minnesota, the definition of 'minnow' in the law of that state being as follows:

" 'Minnow means all genera or species of fish not ordinarily attaining a length of more than four inches at maturity.' "

NEW COUNCIL WILL FILL NUMBER OF CITY HALL JOBS

With voters preparing to journey to the primaries to cast ballots for a mayor and two councilmen in addition to those cast for candidates seeking county offices, there will be many persons seeking positions in city hall.

Most of the two-year terms will expire in March as will several four-year terms. Several persons are filling indefinite terms and their appointment is made at the suggestion of the head of the department with councilmanic sanction.

Although the term of the fire chief and his assistant expire in March, it is not probable a change will be made.

Due to the passage of a law placing sanitary policemen in city service under civil service the only departmental positions which will be voted upon by council will be those of health physician, health office clerk and city nurse.

Other terms that will expire will be those of superintendent of garbage, city clerk, city electrician and assistant, master mechanic, clerk to the superintendent of finance and clerk to the city assessor and city superintendent of streets.

The position as secretary to the mayor is given an indefinite term as is the secretary to the superintendent of parks. Their appointment generally are recommended by the heads of the department and the recommendation is passed upon by members of council.

Aphids Menace Kittanning Trees

(International News Service)

KITTANING, Pa., July 18.—Shade and fruit trees, flowers, vegetables and other forms of plant life about this city and in surrounding parts of the country, are menaced by small insects called "honey dew aphids" and "black aphids."

The honey dew variety of the buds have been centering their attack on the Norway apple trees, though other trees and shrubs have been reported suffering from their ravages.

The black aphids have attacked vines, flowers, fruit trees and vegetables, according to the reports.

City Operation Costs Doubles In Ten Years

Figures On Cost Of Operating New Castle Are Presented

SLIGHTLY LOWER THAN McKEESPORT

By GEORGE H. MANNING
Washington Correspondent of the News)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18. — The cost of running the New Castle city government has more than doubled in the last decade.

Payments for maintenance and operation of the general departments of New Castle for the fiscal year ended January 3, 1927, amounted to $1,201,751, or $23.70 per capita, as compared with $11.11 per capita for 1917.

At McKeesport, during the same period, the city government cost jumped from $12.16 per capita to $26.78 per capita.

During the fiscal year ended January 3, New Castle paid $137,347 as interest on the public debt, $546,492 as outlays for permanent improvements, and $8 for the operation of public conduits. Total payments for all purposes amounted to $1,885,598, which included $943,763 disbursed by the school authorities. Of this latter figure $771,366 represents expenses for maintenance of schools, $76,644 interest on debt, and $95,753 outlays.

Revenue receipts of New Castle for the year, including schools, were $1,714,749, or $33.82 per capita. This was $375,643 more than the total payments of the year, exclusive of payments for permanent improvements, but $170,849 less than the total payments including those for permanent improvements. Revenue receipts for the school district amounted to $985,531. Property taxes represented 71.4 per cent of the total revenue, the per capita tax being $24.15. Ten years ago the percapita tax was $11.98.

New Castle managed to reduce its public debt to $2,483,112. The per capita debt, therefore, for last year was $48.98 as compared with $47.77 for the preceding year. Of the total net debt $1,585,218 was for schools. McKeesport also was able to decrease its debt to $2,138,942, the reduction amounting to $2.78 per capita.

Assessed valuation of property in New Castle subject to ad valorem taxes for city corporation was $55,007,110. The levy for all purposes for 1926 was $1,575,702, of which $536,319, or 34 per cent, was levied for the city corporation; $715,092, 45.4 per cent, for the schools; and $324,291, or 20.6 per cent, for the county. The per capita levy for the city, school, and county was $31.08 as compared with $15.65 ten years before.

Canton Former Police Chief Is Also Found Guilty

Makes Fifth To Be Convicted For Murder Of Canton Editor

CANTON, O., July 18.—S. A. Lengel, former chief of police, was found guilty late Saturday of the murder a year ago of Don R. Mellett, Canton editor. The jury recommended mercy.

The jury deliberated four hours, returning its verdict as 5:30 p. m.

Lengel was accused of participating in the plot for which four other men, one of them his subordinate on the police force, are serving terms in the Ohio penitentiary.

Floyd Streitenberger, former detective under Lengel, was the state's chief witness, testifying that Lengel knew of a plan to "beat up" Mellett in reltalliation for his editorial attacks on the police department which he accused of being in league with the Canton underworld. The plans for the beating miscarried and Mellett was shot to death.

LETTERS TO THE NEWS

SIGNBOARD CONTROVERSY.

Sharon, Pa., July 16, 1927.

Editor New Castle News,
New Castle Pa.

Dear Sir:—

There appeared in your paper recently a statement procured from Sharon, to the effect that a New Castle advertising concern had placed a sign near Hermitage which was a danger hazard to traffic, and was placed there illegally.

While it is no fault of yours whatsoever, that such a statement should be in error, I think out of due credit to the Max Ludwig company, the New Castle concern, this statement should be corrected.

The Max Ludwig company did not erect or maintain the sign in question, but as a matter of fact a New Castle concern went out of your city to procure another agent to erect, paint and maintain the sign.

We have the best of co-operation from the Max Ludwig company in Sharon. They have maintained a policy which has added, rather than detracted from the civic betterment of the community. Their lighted signs have a neat appearance and have added life to the streets.

Out of due credit to these people I think it should be made known that the traffic hazard was created for a New Castle concern, by an out of town agent.

Very truly yours,
JOHN WALLOVER.

Shoots Mother Of Five Children

Husband Expresses No Regret For His Brutal Crime

(International News Service)

HUNTINGDON, Pa., July 18.—Held in Huntingdon county jail on a charge of murder, Leopold Curti, 40, expressed no regret today for having admittedly shot the mother of his five children to death, and having wounded George Prevodo, 34, who, Curti believed, was trying to break up his home.

Curti left his home at Mt. Union near here yesterday, telling his wife Annie, that he was going out of town. Instead, he hid in town for a short time and returning to the vicinity of his home, met Prevodo approaching him in the street. Curti opened fire with one of the two automatic revolvers he carried, one bullet striking Prevodo in the shoulder. Prevodo fled before Curti could fire again. Just as Curti reached the steps of his home according to police, his wife came to the door, and still in an insane rage, the man poured the contents of the two automatics at her. Five bullets entered the woman's body killing her instantly.

Turning to the alarmed neighbors he assured them that he would offer no resistance to police and taken to the county jail here he told attaches he was glad he had committed the crime.

Prevodo was not seriously wounded and was held as a material witness in the shootings.

This is the first time since the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893 that an English locomotive has been sent across the ocean to take part in an American festivity. "Hands across the sea," as it were, is thus again typified, not by aeroplane, but by locomotive.

Letter Sent To Membership Of The Ellwood City Motor Club On Line Avenue Signal

ELLWOOD CITY, July 18.—On Saturday of the past week, the Ellwood City Motor club sent out a letter to the membership relative to a vote on the traffic light at the intersection of North street and Line avenue in the North Side. The officials of the club have been approached by the city police who are desirous of determining what the morotists of the city wish in way of markings at this dangerous intersection.

The suggestion has been made that a properly lighted signal could be placed on North street so that traffic going up the hill, would have the warning and drive ahead cautiously making a right turn at all times thus doing away with the green, yellow, red lights. A traffic census at the point seems to point to the fact that 95 per cent of the traffic at this intersection is making a right hand turn into Line avenue or returning from the same direction, turning left onto the North street.

The officials of the motor club will tabulate the results of mail vote and place them in the hands of the traffic committee of the police department in their endeavor to make the traffic operation of the city as safe and yet as simple as possible.

One of the officials of the club has stated that if traffic solution help was needed that the club would bring in an expert in traffic control to study the conditions as this intersection and report through the motor club to the city officials.

The work that the city police under Chief Teater have been doing along traffic lines is to be commended by the motor club. The new courtesy that the visiting motorist is presented with is making quite a "hit" with the traveling public and samples of the cards have been sent into the state and national headquarters of the American Automobile association.

Col. Eric Fisher Wood Present At Tobyhanna Opening

All Day Saturday Spent In Settling Camp In Readiness For Ten Day Instructions

(Special To The News)

TOBYHANNA, Penna., July 18. — A day of rest has been in order for the members of the Headquarters Company, 107th Field Artillery Unit, starting their annual encampment here.

The Ellwood contingent is faring very well, with the first night under canvas passed by.

The regiment arrived in camp on Saturday a. m. and no sooner than the train had arrived, were orders given to detrain and with the regiment band at the head, under Warrant Officer Lewis W. Bittner, the regiment marched to the Military Reserve, about a quarter of a mile from town.

Immediately on arriving at the reservation, batteries were assigned to their areas. Canvas had already been erected and the artillerymen lost no time in removing their equipment. Considerable work had to be done, but Col. Wood, Commanding officer of the regiment ordered the men to eat first. The cooks had plenty of food prepared.

Saturday was spent in settling camp, and by nightfall, the camp was organized, and ready for a strenuous 10-days field and camp instruction. Church services were conducted this a. m. by Chaplain Burleigh A. Peters of Altoona. Following the services Col. Eric Fisher Wood addressed the men on camp conduct, discipline, and military sanitation.

Col. Wood and his several officers are desirous of safeguarding the health of the men in camp, and every precaution is being taken to avoid any illness among the artillerymen there. Many of the mountain springs and streams are polluted with typhoid germs and all of the soldiers have been instructed to drink only that water provided by the camp. A filtration plant is on the reservation and all water supplied troops is freed from impurities.

Capt. Jenkins and his men look forward to a delightful encampment, and to help in their spare moments, the state has constructed several new boxing arenas, and a new band stand for the regimental band will be a popular place, for concerts.

Touring Car And Truck In Crash

Several Persons Injured In Collision On Line Avenue

ELLWOOD CITY, July 18.—About 5 o'clock Saturday night, according to the local police, a touring car and a large truck were going toward New Castle on Line avenue.

The driver of the truck wished to make a left turn and claims he gave the signal.

The touring car with five occupants attempted to go around the truck, it is said, and collided, resulting in the overturning of the lighter car down a bank several times.

The driver of the car gave his name as John Grossman, while the other occupants were Clyde Smith, John Crea and Earl Eckles of this city. Eckles seemed hurt the worst, having bruises about the head and shoulders and a gash in one shoulder which necessitated the taking of five stitches. Eckles was the only one who stayed in the car. The others were thrown clear, Crea being pinned under, receiving severe burns from the exhaust pipe. Clyde Smith was stunned but otherwise merely shaken up.

The local police have been patroling Line avenue for reckless driving until recently. It is said that the smaller car was going at too great a speed to stop when the truck driver gave the left turn signal. The driver of the touring car is being held for a hearing on a charge of reckless driving before Squire Douds this evening.

British Workers Pledge Not To Steal

(International News Service)

CARLISLE, Eng., July 18.—More than 700,000 British railroad employes have pledged their word not to steal goods conveyed by the four principal railroad groups in Great Britain.

The pledge was made at the annual conference of the National Union of Railwaymen here, when J. H. Thomas, political secretary of the union, criticised the action of the companies in placing detectives at railroad centers to prevent pilfering. Thomas declared he could put the employes on their honor not to steal, and successfully put a motion to the assembled delegates affirming his stand.

"I am satisfied that the prestige of the men's organizations and an appeal to honor will be far more effective than an army of detectives," Thomas said.

We are approaching the time when there will be but two classes—those who have ancestors, and those who will be ancestors.—Rutland Daily Herald.

NEW CASTLE DEFEATS BEAVER FALLS ELKS 4-2

Locals Gain Verdict In Well Played Game

Andy Hospidor Bests Semler In Mound Duel; New Castle Displays Class

Visitors Find Hospidor Hard To Solve; Brehanney And McCoy Prove Stars

By "BUGS" WALTHER

Displaying the punch that wins, and demonstrating the gentle art of hammering the stitched-horsehide, the New Castle team of the O. & P. league, gained a 4 to 2 verdict over the strong Beaver Falls Elks, here Saturday afternoon, at Centennial Field.

The game was replete with thrills of various natures. It was a big long scrap all the time. There was plenty of good baseball, and plenty of kicking on decisions. The New Castle team gained the decision because they could swat the ball when hits were needed most. The visitors had but seven hits off Hospidor. The former Youngstown heaver was harder to solve than a chinese laundry check.

New Castle played heads-up baseball all the way. It was a pleasing sight to watch the visitors strive to reach the bases. Beaver Falls had one big inning, the third, when they hammered Hospidor for two hits and tallied two runs. After the third frame the clever local twirler allowed but five-hits, one in each inning with the exception of the fifth.

Locals Take Lead

The local "Fliers" got away to a good start in the first chapter. Hunt the first man to face Joe Semler nammered the ball into deep left field and it went for a triple. Lawrence singled to left and Hunt tallied. Feigert was thrown out by Swetonic, McCullough singled and Lawrence took third, but both runners were stranded when the next two batters failed to get the ball out of the infield.

The visitors threatened to tally a few runs in the third frame, but their efforts produced but two runs. Croud the first man to face Hospidor drew a walk, Hospidor threw out Smith, with Croud taking second, Joe Semler the Elks pitcher surprised everyone including himself, by hammering a fast inshoot to deep center-field for a tripple, with Croud riding home on the drive. Swetonic scored Semler with a single into right field. Hospidor tightened down after this, and the next two batters were thrown out by McCullough.

New Castle could do nothing with the slants of Semler until the fourth frame, when three hits gave the locals the run that deadlocked the contest at 2-2. McCoy the lead-off man fanned. Dunn smote a single, his second of the game, into left-field. Greenae flied out to Smith on an attempted bunt, Hospidor singled and Dunn took second, Hunt smote a liner to center-field and Dunn raced home.

Hospidor by a brainy exhibition of pitching limited the Elks to one hit for the next five innings, but they could not score. Fast fielding by New Castle aided the former Steelman pitcher in his efforts.

New Castle assumed the lead in the eight inning, McCullough opened the inning by popping to Coud, Brehanney doubled to deep center, McCoy doubled to deep left, Brehaney tallied the winning run, McCoy took third on the play for Brehanney at the plate. McGinley fumbled a hard liner from Dunn, and McCoy tallied.

The Elks threatened in the ninth, McGinley singled, Fitch flied to Dunn, Croud was walked, Smiith hit to Lawrence who tossed to Hunt who tossed to McCoy for a lighting double play that ended the game.

Feigert Saves Day

"Lefty" Feigert again demonstrated his worth to the local club, by saving the day for Hospidor in the eighth frame, Swetonic had led off with a single, Pearson popped to Greenae, Kelly smote a terrific liner to center-field that looked for all the world like a home run, but Feigert gave chase to the flying pellet and captured it, while going at full speed toward the center-field fence. It was a sensational catch.

McCullough was back at third-base Saturday and played his customary fine game, handling four hard chances without a miss. Lawrence at second-base handled eight chances without a wobble, and was one of the real stars of the contest. Hospidor had the only New Castle error, on a wild heave to McCoy at first-base Brehanney, Feigert and Dunn performed in creditable fashion in patroling the outfield.

Semler hurled a fine game for the Elks, and outside of a couple of bad innings, had the locals on a wide-curve. Semler fanned seven of the locals. Hospidor whiffed two of the Elks.

The exhibition turned in by Hospidor on Saturday assures the locals of another dependable hurler, to help Meis, Jamieson, and Feigert. The New Castle pitching staff shapes-up as one of the strongest in the circuit.

ANOTHER CHAMPIONSHIP?

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 18.—Now that long distance dancing, coffee drinking, banana eating and other championships have been disposed of, another long distance "derby" looms. Roger O'Mallia, San Antonio insurance salesman, has established a record of 150 hours without sleep. He accomplished the feat by drinking 35 cups of coffee and smoking six packages of cigarets every 24 hours during the test. Already his record has been challenged and others are expected to try to better the record.

MAKES WINTER TRADE GOOD

Clark Griffith and Stan Harris didn't get the worst of the deal by any means when they traded Roger Peckinpaugh to the White Sox for Pitcher Hollis Thurston and Lee Mangum. For Thurston alone has made the deal a profitable one for the Senators, having turned in over 10 victories to date.

All-Nations Team To Play Locals Tuesday

The Kansas City All-Nations team will be in New Castle on Tuesday night, at 6:15 o'clock, to battle the New Castle-Ygst O. & P. league team, at Centennial Field. The ladies of the city are invited to attend the game free of charge.

The All-Nations team is composed of all manner of players. There are Japanese, Indians, Colored, and White players on the club roster. The team is noted for its clever antics.

The fans are assured of plenty of fun and amusement. The shadow baseball playing and other features will be pulled off prior to the start of the game. Several Nebraska Indians who played in New Castle in 1925 will be with the All-Nations team this year.

Manager Meis will likely send Jamieson or Feigert to the mound tomorrow night.

The revamped New Castle-Ygst team is going strong at the present time and they hope to take the exhibition game here tomorrow. The locals will not play a league game until Saturday when they engage the Cleveland Tellings in a double-bill at Centennial Field.

The game Saturday will be known as a Booster Game, and the automobile raffling will also be held on Saturday.

Sharkey Not Impressive In Training Quarters

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
Sports Editor International News Service

NEW YORK, July 18.—Put a flower under glass, let the rays of the sun go to work and it will arrive and flourish and grow. Put a fighter under glass in a hot house under similar conditions and he will grow, too, but it won't be tall. He will grow lazy, torpid, slow.

The writer is wondering today if anything like that has been allowed to happen to shouting Jack Sharkey. The man with the open mouth. Sharkey is not the boxer that he was before the Maloney fight and not without reason, for some did his guessing very late, if not seldom, in permitting the man to train at Madison Square Garden under conditions that have prevailed there during recent days.

It would be bad enough to send a fighter into a crowded, smoke filled gymnasium in the recent heat but when a skylight ideally located to detract and concentrate the rays of the sun, magnifies its heat directly upon the ring itself the ultimate limit in non-thinking has been reached.

The writer always will believe that Tom Gibbons' pitiful showing against Tunney was due in part to the fact that the sun got him in training and that what the sun missed the heat of the arena the night of the bout managed to complete. Gibbons trained in a roofless ring at Coney Island and the final seven days were killers.

I climber to the edge of the ring for a word with the fighter while he was resting betwen rounds of a training bout. Then I climbed right down again. I had thought for a moment that the soles of my feet were fondling the lid of a red hot stove.

The sun did something of a cure-all for invalids and a kill-all for the athlete who gives it too big a play. It saps the vitality and leaves one listless and without any great heart for violent exercise. Add a skylight to make that sun really burn and blister its way into your haircut and it wouldn't be long until you are as dry as an ex-cocoanut.

McCullough, the local third sacker, led the hitters with a pair of doubles and a single, and also fielded in sensational fashion. McCoy, Lawrence, Feigert and Brehanney also hit timely for the locals.

Ruth-Gehrig Dual Center Of Interest

Players Are Tied At 30 Homers Each—New York Keeps Up Pace

By LES CONKLIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 18.—With interest in the pennant race practically killed by the Yankees' repeated successes, American league fans today turned their attention to the Ruth-Gehrig duel. Gehrig pickled his 30th homer yesterday and is again tied with the Babe. The blow tied the score in the Yankee-Browns contest, and another homer by Bob Meusel on the next ball pitched enabled the New Yorkers to win 5 to 4 for their ninth straight victory over the Brownies.

Old Walt Johnson breezed home to a 7 to 4 win over the White Sox while his mates were shelling Ted Lyons off the landscape. The Sox flopped back into the second division. Tris Speaker collected three hits and passed Ty Cobb's mark in the batting averages.

Detroit climbed to fourth place by nosing out the Athletics in the ninth 5 to 4. McManus tripled and scored when Jimmy Dykes converted a bunt into a touchdown instead of a put-out.

The Cardinals got rough with Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn ace, in the ninth and won 5 to 3 on Schulte's triple. Reinhart, who started on the mound for the world's champions, was batted out of the box by a foul. A long hard foul by Carey in the seventh convinced the St. Louis board of strategy that trouble was in the offing, and Reinhart, much to his surprise, was waved out of the picture.

The other eight teams were idle.

North Hill Indies Defeat Princeton

The North Hill Independents defeated the Princeton A. C., by a score of 17 to 3, in a game played at the North Highland Field, on Saturday afternoon.

Panna's Single Beats "Indies"

Blow Scores Winning Run After Exciting 11-Inning Tilt

Emery, Rodgers and Pannas were the shining bulbs of the 11-inning game between Croton and the Independent A. A. Saturday afternoon, and Croton won, 4 to 3, at Croton.

Rodgers singled in the 11th, was sacrificed to second by Bucchelli and went to third on Blaine's single and scored on Pannas' safe blow.

This gave the Croton team their necessary fourth run to win the game and the team walked from the field with a clean record for their second half games.

Emery went to the mound to opposed Panella and it soon developed that Croton was giving Emery splendid support, while the Independents were prone to slip up on support to Panella.

Emery fanned 13 and allowed 10 hits, while Panella struck out five and gave 11 hits. Mash made a spectacular catch of a long drive by Pannas, doubling Blaine at second.

Since the second half started the Croton A. C. has been playing spectacular baseball and with Emery, one of the best hurlers in the county, they give further promise as a flag contender.

Who'll Finish On Top? By Feg Murray

"Jack be nimble, Jack be quick—which Jack is the other Jack going to lick?" or words to that effect, not forgetting at the same time that it's "jack" the two Jacks are fighting for, in spite of all the hooey about 'logical contendership", "glory" and "showing my friends I can come back", etc., etc.

The winner of this jack-pot will, in the ordinary course of human events, fight Gene Tunney for the world's title, about a year after the ten-dollar-a-word-man defeated Jack Dempsey for the championship in a fight so subtle that nobody has it figured out yet. If Jack Dempsey beats Sharkey, he gets another battle with Tunney and a lot more jack.

"Then", whispers a Malicious Thought, "Tunney will win again, and Sharkey can be built up to fight Tunney next year, thus having two heavyweight fights instead of one."

Very true, but Jack Dempsey, so it is said, has already had an advance of $25,000 from Tex Rickard on the purse of $200,000 or $300,000 which he is to receive for fighting Sharkey. It makes it look as if a lack of "jack" is the only reason for this comeback which would therefore terminate on July 21.

And supposing that all isn't crooked in the fight game after all, and that Jack Sharkey plasters Jack Dempsey all around the ring and knocks him completely upside down and altogether eliminates him, what will Malicious Thought whisper then?

Well, it's very interesting, this battle of the Jacks. Ex-champion Jack, the greatest drawing card of all, will fill at least one more full house for Tex, and when the two Jacks shuffle out to the center of the ring and start dealing out lefts and rights we'll find out which is the Ace and which is the Deuce. Or maybe there'll be a Joker in the deck after all.

Feg Murray Says—

Jack Sharkey, the chatterboxer, does not talk like one of champ Tunney's books, neither is he as easy to shut up.

Severe Damage By Lancaster Storms

(International News Service)

LANCASTER, Pa., July 18.—Hampered by crippled telephonic facilities, authorities today checked the damage done by a series of electrical storms which swept Lancaster county over the week-end, seriously injuring one man and badly disrupting transportation facilities. Several barns were destroyed by fire after being struck by lightning.

Two Pennsylvania railroad trains were mired in the mud near Quarryville for some time before wrecking crews were able to clear the tracks. Several streams, swollen by the torrential rains, went over their banks, with resultant property damage.

Restoration will begin as soon as the explorations now in their third season are completed. They are under the head of Prof. H. C. Shetront, curator of the Ohio museum.

The mound is 16 miles west of Chillicothe on the Cincinnati pike.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., July 18.—William Eugene, two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Craft, was burned to death because he played with matches, it was believed here today.

The child was visiting at the home of Mrs. William Moters at Winslow, nine miles north of here, yesterday, with his mother. Another child had to be taken to a physician in town. Mrs. Craft went, leaving her small son with the Moters children. When the family returned the house was on fire.

Pennsy Wins From Wampum

Wampum Plays Loosely Behind Grinnen And Wampum Loses, 16-3

Pennsylvania had an easy time disposing of Wampum, 16 to 3, in a Lawrence County League game Saturday afternoon at Wampum. Grinnen pitched for the Crescents and was touched up 16 times, while Shields gave out nine hits. Wampum made a multitude of errors behind Grinnen, but this is due no doubt to a lack of teamwork, owing to the loss of several players. Kelnar had an exceptionally poor day, having five errors.

Glimpses Of Nature

By OWEN PENFIELD FOX.

I went into the woodsland at an early hour of four. I longed to see and hear the sounds of wild things as day begins to dawn, and to watch the early morning sun change the pearly dewdrops to brilliant and splendid gems.

The cool rains of the past had chased away that warm and smudgy feeling, and every leaf upon the trees seemed to dance with renewed joy, and as I rambled on enjoying the beauty around me, I watched the morning sun pure gold as it peeped out of misty cloud banks, causing a paradise of colors, pink, purple and scarlet, blazing.

How sweet and comforting was the song of the plover as it came to me in the cool of this July morning. And soaring against a now clearing blue sky, I watched a hawk as he patrolled, ever watching.

Walking on, I stepped into a little wooded clearing and through some tall pine trees that were standing close the sun was throwing long beams of sunlight, like a massive spotlight on a darkened stage. On the ground I counted 40 wild canaries, feasting on the food mother nature had provided, which had fallen among the needles of the pine. As they flitted about their yellow and green bodies touched with black, shown as pure gold in the morning sunlight, with voices raised in happy warblings of thanksgiving.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN

Jacob Ruppert has the richest baseball investment in the world today.

It is paying him bigger dividends than any two other clubs in the major leagues combined.

Col. Jake is sitting pretty. He ought to be. His Yankees are as good as "in" on another pennant—are drawing capacity gates at home and abroad while waiting for the world's series games to roll around and increase the revenue.

All of which makes it much easier for Col. Ruppert to ponder over the problem of providing for Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig next year "in the manner in which they are in the habit of living."

Ruppert breathed a sigh of relief last winter when he signed Babe Ruth to a new three-year contract. True, he had to offer the Bambino (the original Bambino) $70,000 a year. But a brief audit of the club books had shown that the Battering One had netted a profit in his heyday, even at that figure.

And when he began slamming the ball with his best accepted spirit of malice, Ruppert changed his sighs of relief to husky chuckles of joy—called in the boys and passed the cigars around.

But along about cigar-passing time one Lou Gehrig entered the picture.

Now Lou was accounted a valuable member of the Yankee entourage. Miller Huggins had developed him into a good first baseman to replace Wallie Pipp. The midget manager had appreciated Lou's ability as a timely and efficient hitter. When the matter of his yearly stipend was discussed he received a .300 hitter's pay. And that was settled.

But, as mentioned above, Brother Lou upset the apple cart.

He broke out all over as a home run hitter. At first he proceeded to emulate Babe Ruth in a fair fashion. A couple of home runs came along at the proper moment. All very fine, thought the Yankee bosses.

Then he proceeded to add a few more. Still very fine.

When he crept up to Babe Ruth's mark for the season that was also very fine.

But when he dogged Ruth's heels for days and then passed him Messrs. Ruppert and Huggins found themselves faced with something besides the problem of buying more baseballs.

"What's this bird going to do next year?" asked Ruppert of Huggins.

"Hit 'em harder than ever," replied Huggins, proudly.

"Now, still, that isn't what I'm thinking about," said Ruppert, witheringly—as only the stolid little colonel can wither.

"Well, I've got to look over one of them rookie hurlers," said Huggins, and trotted out of the office.

This left—and still leaves—the matter of meeting Mr. Lou Gehrig's 1928 demands entirely up to Mr. Ruppert.

And if "Columbia Lou" continues to match Babe Ruth home run for four bagger you can lay to it that Mr. Gehrig is going to give Mr. Ruppert a chance to match salaries about the same way.

Col. Ruppert, having an acute business sense, will probably start building up a sinking fund the latter part of the campaign to take care of such exigencies.

He will still have the richest baseball investment next season. But Lou Gehrig's salary check will draw much heavier on the cash drawer.

More power to Columbia Lou.

If everything in hell really is rotten, how the realist will enjoy it!

Steubenville Man Commits Suicide

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 18. — Using carbon monoxide gas to end his life after successfully combatting enemy gasses on four different battle fronts during the World War, Paul Hainey, 33, of Dillonville, O., was found dead in his garage by his wife yesterday.

Hainey, who served with Company B, 134 machine gun battallion of the 34th division, during the war was a miner. Because of the recent shut down his funds dwindled, until yesterday, with his last cent gone and after weeks of search for other employment, he gave up.

Yesterday he left to find work. But his wife, Camelia, 28, found his body in the closed garage.

The World War veteran was called a suicide by the coroner. The widow and two children survive.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 18.—The pushcart vendor no longer has a place to push his cart in Baltimore. Ruled off the downtown streets by the police commissioner, 16 vendors applied to Mayor Broening for permission to use the sidewalks. The mayor told them that the permits could not be granted. So the vendors are in a bad way. The city board of estimate has intimated, however, that perhaps a place may be found for the vendors on streets where the merchants and others do not object.

N. Y. STOCKS

NEW YORK, July 18.—Stocks displayed a strong tone in early trading today, although there were a few weak spots. Demand for rails was brisk. Week end business reviews had emphasized the point that recent curtailment in industrial lines was largely season and that the outlook for autumn months was promising. This was a bullish factor.

Northern Pacific advanced 1⅜ at 91½ Erie gained ⅝ to 61½; Southern Railway was ⅜ up at 132½; Great Northern Preferred gained ⅜ at 94¼, Lehigh Valley advanced ⅝ to 128½ and New York, New Haven and Hartford gained ⅝ to 53½.

A few weak spots were noted in the industrial group. United States Steel eased off ¼ to 125¼, American Can was down ⅜ at 57½ and American Smelting declined 1 point to 159½, Baldwin Locomotive advanced to 247⅜, General Electric jumped 2½ to 121½, Mack Truck gained ½ to 98, United States Rubber moved ½ to 44⅜ and Sears Roebuck was a point higher at 60⅝.

Dr. Wilson Tells Of Tour Abroad

Also Reports On International Convention Of Rotary At Ostend, Belgium

Past president Dr. Loyal Wilson addressed the New Castle Rotary club at their noon meeting held today at the Fountain Inn dining room.

Dr. Wilson gave a report of the International Rotary convention at Ostend, Belgium, to which he was a delegate and also gave a brief description of a tour that a party of Rotarians made of Belgium, Gremany and France.

Dr. Wilson in describing the reception of the convention tendered by King Albert of Belgium said that the crowd went wild with applause at his appearance. King Albert is the only member of the Rotary club that belongs in the classification of kings. King Albert said that international friendship could be forwarded by such conventions as this and by international trade.

Ostend had apparently been preparing for the convention for months. The parks were all decorated with beautiful flower beds in the form of the Rotary wheel. And in their tour along the Riveria all hotels and similar places were decorated with American flags and the Rotary insignia in honor of the Rotarians.

Rotarians were present at the convention from all over the world coming to Ostend by boat, train, auto and airplane. Many delegates from England flew over in planes. Dr. Wilson said that if one forgot all that was said by the different speakers one could not forget the feeling of international fellowship caused by these hundreds and hundreds of Rotarians meeting together.

Music was furnished for the convention by King Albert's orchestra. Several exhibitions and athletic contests were held in one of which 5000 girls from many countries of the world participated.

In their tour of Europe Rotary clubs at Luzerne, Florence, Genoa, Nice and Paris entertained them in a true Rotarian way.

Court Sentences Several Prisoners

Judge R. L. Hildebrand Disposes Of Cases Before County Court

Sentence was passed by Judge R. L. Hildebrand in several instances this morning. As a result of the habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of Henry Flickner by Attorney Edwin K. Logan, the matter of the charge of breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony made against Flickner and Anthony Ratzjack came up for consideration. The habeas corpus proceedings were withdrawn and sentence passed on the two men, they being paroled for three years. They were alleged to have been caught in the act of entering a barn for the alleged purpose of theft.

Charles Micco, Lawrence Conti and Joseph Festoso, charged with robbing freight cars of the Erie railroad near the water works, entered pleas this morning before Judge R. L. Hildebrand and were sentenced to pay the costs and to go to the Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza until such time as they are released by process of the law. All three young men had been before the court about a year ago on similar charges, when sentence passed was more lenient and gave them an opportunity of making good.

Wilbur Lutton, of near Wampum, charged with malicious mischief, was sentenced to go to the Pennsylvania Training School. He is alleged to have torn up some clothing and to have taken some mail that did not belong to him, also to have threatened to burn the home of his father. The charge was brought by his father.

ACCUSE BOYS OF STEALING MONEY WHILE ON RIDE

As C. D. Shaner of Sharpsville and Louise McCullough of 305 Orchard street, Sharon, Pa., were passing through New Wilmington Sunday in the Shaner car enroute to this city, they were hailed by two boys, who wanted a lift to this city.

On examination, it was found that it had been opened and rifled of its contents, including $5 or $6 in cash.

The boys were between 10 and 12 years of age and evidently stole the money while being given the ride to this city. It is probable that free rides to this city will be harder to get in the future.

Disease Will Die Says Scientist

Mortality Rates Drop As Life Expectancy Climbs He States

NEW YORK, July 18.—That science will have completely eradicated all disease within the present century and that the average person of a civilized country will live a normal life of 70 years is the belief of Edward Alsworth Ross, noted sociologist and the editor of the American Journal of Sociology.

Within a half of a century infant mortality has been reduced from one death in four births to one death in fourteen births. Average life expectancy has risen from fifty years in 1901 to sixty years today.

Dr. Ross asserts that already almost all of the furies of diphtheria, tuberculosis, malaria, yellow fever, bubonic plague, and others are chained, and the prospect is bright that within the century all of these mass slayers will be lain low. As a result, the races of the future must curb their birth rate or face the serious danger of over population.

1,000 Airports And Landing Fields For United States, View

Air Secretary Of Commerce Department Says Commercial Aviation To Thrive

Estimate That By End Of Present Year Thousands Of Airports Will Dot Country

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 18.—By the end of this year 1,000 air-ports and intermediate landing fields will dot the United States, William P. MacCracken, air secretary of the commerce department announced today following a national survey of aeronautical facilities.

With 864 airports already in operation, more than 100 cities, in all sections of the country have lately appropriated funds or have started the construction of modern fields to stimulate the development of commercial aeronautics, the survey disclosed.

Despite the great development of civil aeronautics in Europe, MacCracken believes that America at last has been awakened to the possibilities of this new form of transportation and within a few years will have surpassed the progress abroad.

Combined Movement

"Chambers of commerce, business clubs, and civic organizations are cooperating in the effort to build up a complete airway and airport system for the United States," MacCracken declared.

Airports now in operation include 207 municipal fields, 163 commercial and private fields, 124 commerce department intermediate fields, 287 miscellaneous intermediate fields, and 83 Army, Navy, National Guard, Treasury and Agricultural department fields.

The Commerce department has provided for about 3,000 unimproved emergency landing fields in all sections. These include pastures or similar areas on which landings and take-offs can be made when necessary.

Buffalo, at a cost of $727,000 has developed a 518 acre airport, with an extensive system of runways and modern equipment. Chicago's municipal airport, according to MacCracken "Is another example of progress in the right direction." New Orleans and Cleveland were other cities mentioned as contributing toward future commercial aeronautical success.

New Castle Man Visiting Battlefield Of Gettysburg Vividly Recalls Scenes Of Epochal Battle Sixty Years Before

Gettysburg, Pa., July 14, 1927.
Editor, New Castle News,
New Castle, Pa.
Dear Mr. Conway,

The quaint old town of Gettysburg of more than a half century ago with its unpaved streets, narrow stone sidewalks and old fashioned brick houses is not the Gettysburg of today. The streets have been paved, modern buildings erected and many changes have taken place, although a few of the old residents still remain.

Gettysburg lies in the midst of some of the most picturesque scenery of southeastern Pennsylvania. Sloping up eastward from the town is an elevation called Cemetery Hill on the summit of which is Evergreen Cemetery. To the southeast of this lies Culps Hill, sloping down somewhat precipitiously in places to Rock Creek and connected with Cemetery Hill by a steep, narrow ridge. Extending southward from Cemetery Hill to Little Round Top Mountain, a mile or more, is a low ridge known as Cemetery Ridge. Immediately south of Little Round Top, separated by a deep, rocky ravine, stands Big Round Top.

To the west of the Round Tops, separated by a small run is a ledge of rocks called the Devil's Den, beyond which is a rocky piece of woods bordering a somewhat triangular shaped field known in history as the "Wheat Field."

Seminary Ridge

About a mile west of Cemetery Ridge is a similar elevation running parallel, and known as Seminary Ridge, taking its name from the Lutheran Seminary located hearby on the Chambersburg Pike.

Between the two ridges extending southwest from the town is a rolling, fertile farming country traversed by the Emmetsburg Road and the road to Middletown. Off to the west on a clear day looms South Mountain Range wrapped in a hazy atmosphere which reflects the tender blue of the sky above.

So much for the topography of what today is a quiet, peaceful landscape but which sixty-four years ago, July first, second and third, was the theatre of the greatest drama ever witnessed on the American Continent.

When, in June 1863, the Union forces under Kilroy at Winchester, Va., were defeated by a detachment of Lee's army, and driven north, every intelligent observer of events realized that it would only be a question of time until the greatest army ever organized under the Confederate banner would sweep northward into the old Keystone state. Farmers in southeastern Pennsylvania and northern Maryland rushed their livestock northward in order that they might not fall into the hands of the advancing armies. Consequently during the last days of June, large droves of horses, cows, sheep and hogs swept through Gettysburg daily on their way farther north.

To Check Invaders

The Government at Washington became very much alarmed and General Couch was sent to Harrisburg to organize the militia and raise an army sufficient to check the invaders. An urgent call for volunteers was issued, but there was slight response, which was, perhaps, just as well, for had General Couch succeeded in organizing an army equal in numbers to that of the invaders, it would have cut a sorry figure in attempting to check the advance of Lee's seventy three thousand veterans—men inured to hardships, skilled in warfare and fearless in battle. Only an army of like training, skill and bravery could hope to cope successfully with the invaders, and that army—the Army of the Potomac, under command of General Hooker, later under command of General Meade, was rushing northward parallel with Lee's army. Like two mighty monsters they dodged hither and thither through the mountain passes, each watching for an opportunity to spring upon the other, yet each so skillfully generaled that the opportunity did not present itself until both willed it at Gettysburg.

The battle of Gettysburg is a part of history with which most people are familiar, so I will only touch lightly upon some of the high spots and mention a few facts not recorded in history.

About a week before the battle a Confederate cavalry brigade under command of General Gordon, (that admirable Southern gentleman who afterward became governor of his native state, and through his numerous lectures, north and south, did so much toward bringing about a better understanding and sympathy between the two sections), entered Gettysburg. They made no move to molest the citizens or damage the town. They quietly marched through, riding four abreast, men and horses completely covered with a coating of the white dust from the limestone roads over which they had ridden that day. Passing through the town they disappeared along the road leading toward York.

A few days later another Confederate detachment entered Gettysburg, marched to the courthouse square and called for the Burgess and town council. When those officials appeared, the colonel demanded five hundred barrels of flour, five thousand pounds of pork, and seventy five thousand dollars in gold or silver. He said that they would not accept Yankee greenbacks or Confederate graybacks, and added that if his demand was not complied with inside of twenty-four hours they would burn the town.

Demands Impossible

The Burgess finally convinced them that it would be impossible to comply with their demands, as the merchants and bankers, in anticipation of their coming, had shipped their goods further north to places of safety, and that there was scarcely enough food in the town to supply the women and children.

The Confederates remained, however, and camped in and around the courthouse and their band played "Dixie," "My Maryland" and other Confederate airs, until midnight for the edification of the frightened and disgusted citizens. They remained until noon the next day when they took their departure suddenly without waiting to say goodbye.

They were scarcely out of town when a Union cavalry brigade under command of General Buford entered, marched through and out the Chambersburg road beyond the Seminary where they went into camp in a field to the right of the road near McPherson's woods.

Battle Line Forms.

Early next morning they got word that a part of Lee's army was approaching along the Chambersburg pike. Immediately all were astir. A line of battle was formed extending across the road and along the ridge to the right, and to the left in front of McPherson's Woods, while other soldiers, each leading four horses, formed a line in the rear.

As the morning sun peeped above the horizon a large column of Confederates was seen approaching along the road from Chambersburg, their banners waving and their muskets gleaming in the morning sunlight. On they came until the head of the column reached the depression thru which flows Willoughby run, where they spread out in line of battle, swept up the western slope of the ridge and opened fire on the Union lines. Thus began one of the greatest battles ever fought on American soil—a battle which all knew must mark the beginning of the end, resulting in the dismemberment of the union or the downfall of the southern cause.

History has recorded the results of the first day's battle—how reinforcements kept arriving on both sides and how the Union lines were forced back through Gettysburg, how General Hancock, sent forward by Meade, arrived upon the scene late in the afternoon, reformed the Union lines on Cemetery Hill, Culps Hill and fortified the ridge between, and how the main body of the Union army arrived during the night and their lines extended across the Emmettsburg road.

The main fighting during the second day took place along the Union left wing and during the afternoon became serious beyond the Emmettsburg road to a peach orchard, extending to the Devil's Den and the Wheat Field.

One standing on the summit of Little Round Top on the afternoon of July second might have witnessed the terrible struggle in the wheat field. The Confederates charged across the field and were forced back by the Union soldiers in the back of Devil's Den. Seven times the armies charged back and forth across the field. In the morning it was a field of ripened grain ready for the reapers. At sunset not a single stalk of wheat remained. It was all tramped into the dust and the field was literally covered with dead men and horses and implements of war. It was truly a harvest field, but the reaper was Death!

During the afternoon General Warren ascended Little Round Top and made his way to a cluster of huge rocks on the western brow of the hill where the Union signal officers were stationed. The keen eye of the general quickly discovered that Little Round Top was the strategic key to the situation, and that the Confederates were executing a flank movement to gain possession of it.

"General," said one of the signal officers, "it seems to me there are rebs in that woods over yonder," pointing to a strip of woods beyond the Devil's Den.

"Fire a shot into that woods," ordered the general.

The officer obeyed and there was a slight movement in the woods which revealed the gleam of a musket.

As the general turned to go a shower of bullets struck the rocks, and the signal officers began to gather up their instruments preparatory to seeking a safer place. Seeing this the general said:

"Gentlemen, for God's sake remain where you are and keep on waving your flags to deceive the enemy until I can rush troops up here to hold this hill."

The signal officers remained at their post and in a short time troops and artillery were rushed to Little Round Top, but not a minute too soon. A force of Confederates was already ascending the southwestern slope, but was forced back and Little Round Top was securely held. To General Warren's foresight is largely due the final victory at Gettysburg. On the rock on which he stood that day as he ordered the shot to be fired into the woods there is now a life sized bronze statue of him, looking off towards the woods in which the Confederates were concealed.

Late in the evening a sharp engagement took place in the extreme Union right beyond Culps Hill in the vicinity of Spranglers Spring. The Union forces were driven out of their entrenchments which were occupied by the Confederates during the night.

That night the soldiers slept in line of battle, the living the dead lying side by side. Meanwhile the Union lines extending across the valley were withdrawn to Cemetery Ridge, thus forming a continuous line from the foot of Culps Hill on the southeast to Little Round Top on the south, three miles in length. The Confederate lines were seven miles in extent.

The morning of the third was ushered in by heavy firing along the extreme Union right, which lasted until the middle of the forenoon when the Confederates were driven out of the works they had captured the evening before. From that time until 1 o'clock not a shot was fired. All was quiet along the lines. It was the calm which precedes the storm.

The world never saw braver fighting or more skillful generalship than when the Blue met the Gray. But the supreme test is yet to come. The task before the two armies is one that calls for heroes—men ready to do and die. Let us hike backward through the years and take a position on Cemetery Hill where we can view the scene:

The blazing July sun is climbing toward the zenith and beating down upon the 25 square miles of battle field. One hundred and fifty thousand men are crouching, grimly waiting for the next move which all feel is going to be a decisive one. Over yonder in the clover field to the right, along the ridges, in the open fields, in the woods and among the rocks—everywhere they lie, the dead and wounded, the dry dusty ground literally baked with their blood, the glassy eyes of the dead staring at the blue sky, while the wounded are calling for water, or for someone to shoot them and end their suffering.

The noon hour approaches and still not a shot is fired. Away across yonder in the tower of the Seminary building we can see General Lee and some of his staff. They are surveying the scene through field glasses, doubtless planning the next move on the part of the confederates. In a little house east of Cemetery Ridge at a table sits General Meade, grim, dignified and silent, surrounded by officers ready to obey his orders. It is nearing 1 o'clock. Hark! a single cannon shot booms out from the Confederate lines in the woods over yonder on Seminary Ridge. The smoke is curling up slowly on the still air. A minute passes. There comes another shot! Now the entire Confederate right along the ridge bursts into a sheet of flame! The Confederate batteries are concentrating their fire upon the Union left center on Cemetery Ridge. Now the Union batteries are replying, from Cemetery Hill to Little Round Top. The roar is deafening! The earth trembles and the air is filled with deadly missiles and bursting shells. The men firing the batteries along Cemetery Ridge are dropping like tenpins, but others are springing forward to take their places.

The hours pass and still the most awful artillery duel ever witnessed on the American continent continues unabated. It is almost 4 o'clock. The sun is sinking toward the western horizon. The Union batteries have ceased firing. It is General Meade's orders. He says the firing on the part of the Confederates is only preliminary to a charge and he wants the Union guns to cool so they can be used to repel the charge. The Confederates have ceased firing too. They evidently think the Union batteries are disabled or out of ammunition. That is just what General Meade wants them to think.

See! The Confederates are forming lines on Seminary Ridge. There they come, Pickett's division, three lines deep, nearly a mile long, flanked on the right and left by the flower of Lee's army. On they come across the fields with perfect rhythmical swing, their bands playing and their colors flying—a mighty military machine which threatens to sweep everything before it. The Union lines look on in admiration and a mighty cheer rings along the ranks from Cemetery Hill to Little Round Top. Was ever a greater compliment paid to an enemy? Only brave men could do it.

Now the Confederate columns are approaching the Emmettsburg road. The Union batteries are opening fire. From the Cemetery to Little Round Top they deluge the advancing hosts with shot and shell. Great gaps are created in the Confederate ranks, but they close up and come on. Meanwhile troops from the right and left wings of the Union lines are rushing toward the threatened point of attack. Will they reach it in time?

The Confederates are crossing the Emmettsburg road under a terrific fire. They are halting to reform their lines. It reminds one of a tiger crouching to spring upon its prey. They are sweeping up the slope. Now they strike the Union line which is forced back by the terrific impact. Friend and foe are mingled together, fighting hand to hand and with clubbed muskets. As the Union line bends back it tenses and tightens like the string of a bow to speed the arrow, the Confederates are hurled back—back down the slope, back across the Emmettsburg road, back across the dead strewn fields to the shelter of Seminary Ridge, and the battle of the third day is ended. Te Confederacy has reached High Water Mark. Never again will it come so near to success.

The next day, the Fourth of July, was spent by both armies in gathering up the dead, amid flies and stench, and burying them in long trenches. But I must forbear to dwell upon this gruesome task which fell to the lot of the surviving soldiers. That night it began to rain. Thus nature, with her tears, washed away the blood stains of the battle. During the night Lee's army silently withdrew, retreating southward and the great battle of Gettysburg faded into history.
